All Italy Rallies For War; 3,000 Troops Embark

Concentration of Fascist and Regular Regiments Pushed.

Criticism of Eden's Plan Is Welcomed

Rome Pleased by French Refusal to Aid League Intervention.

By the Associated Press.

Rome, July 7.—Concentration of numerous Fascist battalions and regular army regiments was pushed today as the Italian nation rallied behind Benito Mussolini's apparent intention to wage war with Ethiopia.

Three ships left for East Africa over the-week-end, bearing more than 3,000 men and officers. Numerous other vessels waited at docks for the regular and volunteer battalions, one of which is en route from Tripoli to join the newly created Black Shirt division, "The Third of January."

Newspapers gave jubilant headlines to dispacthes saying France had refused to back England in an action before the League of Nations designed to obstruct Italy's war aims.

Reaction on United States Stand.

Articles from London scoring Capt. Anthony Eden and other members of the cabinet for the "tentative offer" of a seaport to Ethiopia were prominently displayed.

In contrast, the neutral tone of Washington's answer to Emperor Haile Selassie's request for invocation of the Briand-Kellogg pact was held before the public as evidence of the United States' friendliness toward Italy and an American realization that this country is justified in its stand.

Rome was the scene of a mock battle today between young Black Shirts while regular officers in many mobilization cantonments spent the Sabbath putting finishing drill touches on troops destined soon to brave the mountains, jungles and sands of East Africa.

Most observers predicted fighting would begin in September. Some thougt it would come at an even earlier date.

Military circles said this country's first move would be to spring upon Adowa, where the Ethiopians wiped out an Italian army nearly 40 years ago. A desire for revenge is still fresh in Rome.

Italy is determined to go ahead, regardless of what England may do. The constant cry here is that there will be "no Fashoda in 1935." Fashoda was a Sudanese town where the British kept the French from Sudan under threat of war.

Trade Cause of Quarrel.

British opposition has done more than anything else to strengthen Italian public opinion behind Il Duce's East African campaign. On the other hand, the reaction to Washington's note to Ethiopia refusing to act under the Briand-Kellogg pact has been good here and the American move was termed infinitely more diplomatic than the attitude taken by England.

The strength of a Black Shirt division going to East Africa, it was disclosed, has been raised from 12,000 to 15,000 men. Four such divisions have been announced. Another will be ready soon.

A conciliation commission still is meeting in the Netherlands in an attempt to settle the controversy. It is discussing only border incidents and these are merely a minor element in the Italo-Ethiopian quarrel.

A major point is economics. Ethiopia, fearing Italy's growing importance in East Africa, has failed to carry out a 1928 treaty giving Italy economic penetration. Instead of buying and selling with Italy, Emperor Haile Selassie turned to other markets, chiefly Japanese.

Italy's East African colonies of Eritrea and Somaliland can not flourish without their hinterland, which is Ethiopia. These colonies have already cost far more than they have produced.

MRS. GRAHAM FAIR VANDERBILT

Mrs. Vanderbilt Is Dead in N.Y.; Silver Heiress

Daughter of Late Senator Fair 57; Famous for Lavish Parties.

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 7.—Mrs. Graham Fair Vanderbilt, noted as a sportswoman, art patron and philanthropist by virtue of her father's silver fortune, her husband's social position and her own vigorous personality, died at her town house today after a nine-week illness.

The only clew to her age was a report that she was 21 when she and William K. Vanderbilt were married in a brilliant setting at Newport on April 4, 1899. That would make her 57 years old.

She and her husband separated in 1909, and, being a Catholic, it was 18 years before she consented to a divorce. In 1927, however, the decree was granted in Paris after she charged Vanderbilt with moral desertion and continued absence, and he charged her with incompatability and coolness. Vanderbilt then married Rosamond Lancaster, the former Mrs. Barclay H. Warburton. She never remarried.

Father U. S. Senator.

Mrs. Vanderbilt, the former Virginia Fair, took the name of Mrs. Graham Fair Vanderbilt after her divorce. She was one of two daughters of the late United States Senator James Graham Fair, of Nevada. Her late sister, Theresa, was the wife of Herman Oelrichs.

Fair, an Irish immigrant, joined the 1849 gold rush to California. When the Comstock Lode was discovered in Nevada he went to Virginia City and became interested in silver mining. There he amassed a fortune, in partnership with John W. Mackay, father of Clarence Mackay, James C. Flood, and William T. O'Brien. He became Senator in 1881.

Mrs. Vanderbilt and her husband had a son and two daughters. William K. Vanderbilt, jr., was killed at Ridgeland, S. C., November 15, 1933, when his automobile hit a fruit truck parked on the highway as he and a relative and chauffeur were driving north from Miami.

The daughters are Muriel and Consuelo. Muriel, formerly the wife of Frederic Cameron Church, jr., of Boston, now is Mrs. Henry Delafield Phelps. She came here

Prison Break Fails, Slayer Kills Himself

By the United Press.

Birmingham, Ala., July 7.—A condemned murderer killed himself with the warden's gun today when guards at the Jefferson County Jail defeated his daring attempt to escape.

The prisoner, under death sentence for killing a policeman in a night club robbery, was Richard T. Darrofou, Russian-born Pacific Coast bandit.

Flashing a knife at the throat of an inside warden, Darrofou threw open the doors to the cells of five condemned men, and shouted to them "Come on out, boys."

But only his companion in crime, Wesley Vincent, formerly of the Marines, and of Shelton, Wash., followed him. Darrofou and Vincent ran into the kitchen, overpowered the dietitian, W. T. Whited, and seized two 16-inch carving knives.

Beat Him to Gun.

From there thde killers rushed on to the office of Chief Warden J. D. Pinson, where they beat Pinson to his gun, threatening him with the long butcher knives.

Guards closed in and, as alarm bells in the skyscraper jail clanged within earshot of worshipers in downtown churches, Darrofou shot himself in the left breast.

The shot was not fatal, however. Darrofou staggered and threw down his gun. As guards surrounded him, he picked up the gun again and fired another shot into his chest. He fell by the warden's desk.

The prisoner produced his knife as Inside Warden J. D. Russum and five Negro trusties entered the death cell block for its daily cleaning.

He backed Russum into one cell and herded the five Negroes into another. His captives stood helplessly in the cells while Darrofou calmly pleaded with other condemned men, and three other prisoners, to escape with them.

Failed to Snap Latch.

Vincent, also sentenced to die in the electric chair for his part in the night club robbery murder with Darrofou, followed. Warden Pinson, reading at his desk, was taken by surprise. The two men were listed as desperate criminals and Pinson knew them the moment they stormed into his office with the knives.

He quickly reached for his gun, but Darrofou beat him to it.

Meanwhile, Russum, locked in the upstairs death cell, discovered that Darrofou had failed to snap the latch on the Negro trusties. They opened the door, released Russum, who threw the switches that set off the noisy alarm.

Deputies several floors below heard the alarm and ran to Pinson's office, where they surrounded Darrofou. They would have killed him, they said, if the prisoner had not killed himself.

Deputies said Vincent lost his bravado and "went yellow." He fell to the floor, feigning unconsciousness, to keep the guards from killing him. He was picked up and returned to his cell, still feigning unconsciousness.

Tanker Rescues 150 On 'Rubberneck' Yacht

New York, July 7 (A).—A steam excursion yacht became disabled in the Hudson today but was berthed safely tonight by an oil tanker which went to her rescue and 150 passengers debarked.

The yacht Tourist makes two trips daily around Manhattan Island with sightseers. Her driving shaft broke when she was three-quarters of a mile north of the George Washington Bridge, en route to her pier at the Battery. The tide carried her toward the rocky shore of New Jersey and she sent out distress signals. The marine division of the police department and the Coast Guard were notified but before they could aid the tanker towed the yacht to a dock at West 153d street where her passengers landed.

Robbed Man Loses Cash, Pants, Dignity

His losses included $26 in bills, his pants, shirt and shoes, and finally consciousness.

Attired only in his underwear and looking a bit sheepish, Strohm walked into Emergency Hospital early yesterday and asked to be treated for cuts on his face.

He said he was standing in front of his home when two men drove up and asked how to get to the Shoreham Hotel. One of the men got out of the car and made for him. The next thing he could remember was waking up near the Washington Monument, his money, his clothes and his dignity gone.

Youth Fleeing Capital Home Killed in Train

The love of youth for the open road brought death yesterday to one Washington boy and serious injury to another when they were trapped and crushed by a shifting load of steel while riding a flat car in Baltimore.

Robert Testerman, 15, of 708 I street southeast, was killed and John Sweeney, 16, of 107 E street southeast, seriously injured when they were crushed by steel beams. Earl Sweeney, 15, stood by powerless to help as his brother was pinned against the flat car by the beams.

A few hours of freedom from the routine of the Industrial Home School for Boys had been granted to Robert Testerman and Earl Sweeney.

Each had been allowed to go home for the July 4 celebration, their widowed mothers said.

"Best July 4 Ever."

"It was the best July 4 celebration we had ever had," said Mrs. Bessie Testerman, the mother of the dead boy.

"John is so badly injured that he can not live," Mrs. Lula Mae Sweeney told a reporter.

After their few hours of freedom from the home, Earl Sweeney and Testerman were returned to the home. They disappeared from the Wisconsin avenue institution Friday.

Testerman came to the Sweeney home Saturday and the Sweeney boys gave him some clothes and they started out for the freight yards.

As they rode through the Pennsylvania freight yards in Baltimore the train stopped abruptly, the jerk shifting the steel load.

Steel Slides Forward.

Earl Sweeney and an unidentified boy at the other end of the car saw their plight and screamed for help. Railroad men ran to their assistance.

Before steel cranes were brought into use to lift the steel beams, Testerman was dead and John Sweeney was unconscious. The injured boy is in a Baltimore hospital.

Thought Kidnaped, in Jail.

Columbus, Ohio, July 7 (A).—Albert Chiocca, 16, of New York City, whose disappearance from his home Wednesday caused a report that he had been kidnaped, is serving out a $15 fine and costs here for train riding, police said tonight.

Paralysis Toll 18, Carolina Fear Mounts

Raleigh Officials Caution Against Congregating During Epidemic.

New Vaccine Tried Out on Children in Guilford County.

By the United Press.

Raleigh, N. C., July 7.—Alarmed public health authorities today reiterated warnings against congregation of children, as a mounting epidemic of infantile paralysis left death and lameness in the mid-State section of North Carolina.

Two deaths from the disease and ten new cases were reported yesterday. Eighteen fatalities have been recorded since May 1, when the outbreak became evident. The ten new cases sent the case-total for the year to 312, of which 297 developed since May 1.

Although the epidemic is concentrated in the east-central section, cases have been reported in 61 of the State's 100 counties, according to Dr. J. C. Knox, State epidemiologist.

Coastal Area Spared.

Three hundred applications of the Park-Brodie infantile paralysis vaccine have been administered children in Guilford County under direction of Dr. A. G. Gilliam, of the Federal Public Health Service, in an experiment to determine its efficiency. The result of the large-scale test may not be known for months, Dr. Knox said.

The vaccine, developed by Dr. William H. Park and Dr. Morris Brodie, has proved highly effective in isolated cases. It is obtained from the spinal systems of monkeys, infected and killed by the poliomyelitis germ.

Dr. Knox discounted persistent reports that a general quarantine for the affected area is considered. However, numerous city and county health authorities have enacted emergency regulations prohibiting children attending public gatherings.

Washington Sends Expert.

Dr. Leroy W. Hubbard, director of extension of Warm Springs Foundation, here to assist local authorities in combating the outbreak, suggested postponement of opening rural schools, scheduled for next week.

Dr. W. P. Dearing, another Federal health officer, was expected to arrive tomorrow from Washington to aid in the campaign. He was associated with Dr. J. P. Leake in fighting the infantile paralysis epidemic in California last year.

Summer school classes, scout meetings, Sunday school, picnics, court terms and other public meetings have been postponed indefinitely in the central section.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, July 7.—The 4-H Club camp at Jamestown, scheduled to open tomorrow, has been postponed on advice of Dr. I. C. Riggin, State health commissioner, it was disclosed tonight. Those in charge of the camp had asked the department for advice.

"There is no change in the infantile paralysis situation in the State," Dr. Riggin said. "Since July 1 the number of cases has increased throughout the State from 52 to 64. I did, however, advise them not to hold the 4-H camp."

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Lynchburg, Va., July 7.—A mild case of infantile paralysis has been reported at Piney River, Nelson County, and the patient has been given a serum which was secured in Lynchburg. There are two cases here segregated in a Lynchburg hospital.

Dr. Mosby G. Perrow, head of the health bureau, has been advised by Dr. John A. Kolmer, of Philadelphia, that his serum, still in the experimental stage, can be made available to patients here.

Vandenberg Demands Tax Equality for All; U. S. Spurs Financing

1939 Maturity Set At 1⅜ Per Cent

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

In a move to replenish its working balance in anticipation of large works - relief expenditures, the Treasury yesterday called on the money markets to supply it with $500,000,000 at 1⅜ per cent for a four-year, five-month security.

The new security issue, consisting of Treasury notes bearing an unusually low interest rate for such a maturity, will be dated July 15. They will mature December 15, 1939, and are not callable before that date. The notes will be exempt, both as to principal and interest, from all taxation, except estate, inheritance and gift taxes.

Although the working balance of the Treasury on July 3, the last day for which figures are available, totaled $1,359,681,950, the sum in special depositaries account of sales of Government securities had dropped to $448,220,000. This figure at the end of June was $799,021,000.

Recent Heavy Drains.

The reason for the rapid depletion of that fund in the first three days of July resulted from nonrecurring drains made on the Treasury at the beginning of the fiscal year, July 1. These included a payment of $100,000,000 into the veterans' adjusted-service certificate or bonus fund; $40,512,000 as the Government's contribution to Federal retirement funds and an advance of $86,501,894 to the Commodity Credit Corporation.

This note issue will add another $500,000,000 to the public debt, which apparently will show rapid increases over the next few months as the Administration starts disbursing the $4,000,000,000 works relief fund. There will not be another substantial payment of income taxes until the third quarterly installment is due September 15. Meanwhile, the Treasury's income will consist chiefly of miscellaneous internal revenue and customs.

Public Debt 28 Billion.

The public debt on June 30, end of the last fiscal year, was $28,700,892,624. Since that time it has decreased as retirement of national bank notes has released for retirement the 2 per cent consols called for redemption as of July 1.

The called consols totaled $599,724,050. These securities are being retired out of the so-called gold profit and thus their redemption when completed will represent that much of a decrease in the public debt.

But the newly announced $500,000,000 note issue will add that much to the public debt, so that the debt for the next month or so—aside from the lag resulting from retirement of national bank notes—will remain about the same. The public debt figure for the close of business last Wednesday was $28,677,518,501.

The deficit for the first three days of the fiscal year—due, as explained, to disbursements which will not recur in the fiscal period—was $247,912,347, compared with $3,187,280 in the same period of the previous year. The deficit for the first three days of July was more than one-half of the $441,886,668 deficit for all of June.

Since the present fiscal year is expected to produce an all-time record deficit for the Treasury—estimated at $4,500,000,000, compared with $3,575,357,963 for the year just ended and $3,989,496,035 for the previous year—it has got off to a flying start the first week.

SEN. WILLIAM DIETERICH.

Fight Impends In Both Houses On Utility Bill

Senate to Act on 'Death Clause' as House Opens Lobby Inquiry.

Members of Congress yesterday were preparing for another utility holding company battle on two fronts this week. In the Senate the question of acceptance or rejection of the "death sentence" provision will be fought out, with indications that the vote will be close. The House Rules Committee will begin its investigation of lobbying activities in connection with the utility bill.

The bill, passed by the House without the provision demanded by President Roosevelt for abolition of "unnecessary" holding companies by 1942, will come before the Senate today for concurrence in the House amendment. The bill, with the "death sentence" provision, passed the Senate by only one vote.

Move to Concur Due.

Senator Dieterich (Democrat), Illinois, will move that the Senate concur in the House amendment. If the motion is adopted the "death sentence" provision will be definitely out and the measure will go to the President for signature or a possible veto.

Senator Wheeler (Democrat), Montana, co-author of the bill, will seek to have the Senate and House bills sent to conference, where a joint committee of both Houses will endeavor to decide on recommendations as to the section in controversy. In event the measure is sent to conference, it is possible it may never be acted upon by the committee, but permitted to die.

The battle over the "death-sentence" provision must share the stage with what is expected to be a spirited hearing when the House Rules Committee gets under way. Representative Brewster (Republican), Maine, and Thomas Corcoran, an RFC attorney, who helped write the bill, are expected to tell their stories.

Brewster has charged that Corcoran sought to intimidate him into voting for the "death-sentence" provision by threats that public works money for the Passamaquoddy power project in his State would be withdrawn. Corcoran, who contends that Brewster misunderstood him, said he was ready to answer the charges.

The House inquiry is expected to Morgenthau to 'Advise' Committee Today on New Levy.

Bill to Be Written When Hearings End

Senator Calls Roosevelt Program Incomplete, Superficial.

By Felix Bruner.

Faced with a growing demand for broadening of the base for proposed new income and inheritance taxes, the House Ways and Means Committee will begin today its hearings preliminary to actual writing of a bill.

A demand that taxpayers other than the "very rich," referred to by President Roosevelt in his message to Congress, be included in the measure was made in a radio appeal last night by Senator Vandenberg (Republican), Michigan. He called the Roosevelt program "inadequate, incomplete and pathetically superficial."

Some observers, however, felt that the Administration would not object to some form of the plan, proposed by Vandenberg and others, that the tax bill be broadened to provide substantial revenue in view of the continuing enormous Government expenditures.

Morgenthau to Be Witness.

Secretary Morgenthau will be the first witness before the committee. He is expected to discuss various bases for a tax plan, some of them going much further than those first proposed by Administration leaders.

The commission is expected to hurry the hearings as much as possible, perhaps concluding them this week, in view of constant pressure for early adjournment and the President's desire for speed. Vandenberg joined Senator McNary in the suggestion that Congress recess while the tax measure is being written and that it reconvene in the fall to consider it.

Secretary Morgenthau is not expected to make any specific recommendations but merely to "advise" the committee. Committee members recalled that President Roosevelt did not place any limitations on the fixing of rates, but expressed the hope that the taxes would raise a substantial amount. Committee members, as well as Senator Vandenberg and others, pointed out that the plan proposed following the President's message would not raise more than $400,000,000 on the basis of the most optimistic estimates and that this could not be considered a "substantial amount" in comparison to Government expenditures.

"Of course 'the rich' must pay—and pay up to the hilt," Vandenberg said in his radio speech. "But let us not delude ourselves. The income tax base must be broadened and all the brackets must accept a heavier load. There is no other way to get the money. Inevitably millions of our citizens must contribute, each according to his ability to pay. Nor will they unduly complain if they may be assured that they are buying national solvency. Otherwise they will have a right to complain—and bitterly."

Sees Political Move.

Vandenberg recalled that President Roosevelt last January had told Congress that no new taxes would be necessary for 1936. He said he did not believe that when the President sent his tax message to Congress he expected immediate action.

"Evidently he figured he was simply launching an adroit political flank movement to surround and confound his own restless and vocal left-wingers," he continued. "But the left-wingers promptly and gleefully put him on the spot. They demanded immediate action as proof of good faith. They were in no mood for pale promises which might never mature."

The Federal treasury, Vandenberg said, "is racing merrily toward potential insolvency."

"The spending spree still continues at break-neck speed," he said. "We pillage our grandchildren. We still spend $2 for every dollar we take in. It is only a question of time when such a crazy process ends like the career of any other wastrel."

"Soap Box Formula."

Vandenburg said there can be only two possible results, inflation or a balanced budget through increased taxation. He declared that uncontrolled monetary inflation "could cruely crucify us all."

"We can not escape the need for new taxes," he said. "This need is already here. Paying out has been a happy holiday. Paying back is something else. To the extent he asserts the need for revenue, the President is right. But his own proposals thus far are inadequate, incomplete and pathetically superficial. They strain at a gnat and swallow the camel. It is politics rather than economics. To this extent the President is ominously wrong."

The Michigan Senator told his radio audience that the total incomes of all the multi-millionaires "thus marked for slaughter" would

John D. Rockefeller, 96 Today, 'Has Not Felt Better for Years'

Son Affirms Excellent Health of Oil King and Dentist Says Recent Examination Showed He Still Has 19 of His Original Teeth.

By the Associated Press.

Lakewood, N. J., July 7.—John D. Rockefeller, who will be 96 years old tomorrow, "hasn't felt better in many years," his son, John D. Rockefeller, jr., said today at the close of a union service in the First Presbyterian Church here.

The Rev. Marshall Sewell, pastor of the First Baptist Church for the last 12 years, said he was notified that the frail little man who once possessed one of the world's great fortunes would not attend a service earlier in the day because of the heat and humidity.

The nonagenarian's son arrived at Golf House, the Rockefeller estate today, and attended the union service, accompanied by Miss Katherine Hinsdale, librarian of the Lakewood Public Library, who later was a luncheon guest at the Rockefeller home, and Mrs. Hattie Evans, housekeeper at Golf House.

Rockefeller said his father did not plan to talk to the press today or tomorrow, but that he was not in poor health.

"He hasn't felt better in many years," he said.

Dr. Max A. Goldstein, of Lakewood, who has examined Rockefeller's teeth each year for the last eight years, said today he received his annual visit on June 25. He said Rockefeller was accompanied by John Yordi, his valet, and spent almost a half hour in the dental chair.

Dr. Goldstein said Rockefeller still has 19 of his original teeth, all of them in good condition. He said he found no need for filling, drilling or extracting.

During the examination, he said, Rockefeller chatted with him about the weather and asked him how his business was.

Thousands of Homes Flooded As Dikes Fall in Inland China

By the Associated Press.

Changteh, Hunan Province, China, July 7.—The greatest disaster of recent years befell this prosperous inland Chinese city today when dikes on the Yuen River collapsed and a wall of water engulfed the city and surrounding countryside. An undetermined number of persons were drowned.

All members of the foreign colony, consisting of approximately one dozen American missionaries and a group of British and Australian religious workers, were reported safe.

Thousands of homes were inundated and residences of Americans representing the Northern Presbyterian Mission were under 10 feet of water.

The flood has already exceeded in proportions that which swept the area in 1931 when the Yangtse River raged through Central China, leaving death and desolation behind on an unmatched scale.

With this city and area facing disaster, rain continued to fall tonight. Nearby Tungting Lake was out of its bounds. Officials feared unless the weather moderated great loss of life would occur.

A Hankow dispatch said the waterfront at Kiukiang was under 4 feet of water.

In addition to the Presbyterian Mission here, other missions are the Christian and Missionary Alliance, headquarters in New York; the Canadian Holiness Movement, with headquarters at Ottawa, and the China Inland Mission, with American headquarters in Philadelphia.

Changteh is 252 miles from Hankow, situated on the north bank of the Yuen River with high mountains at its back and an extensive plain to the east.

Rescued Boy of 12 Swims Back To Die With Father, Brother

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., July 7.—Former City Magistrate W. C. Tiller and his two young sons were drowned today in Bensley's Pond, Petersburg turnpike, near here. Wilmer, 12, the older of the two boys, lost his life in attempting to save his father after he had himself been rescued by Bryant W. Jones, of R. F. D. Route 7.

Jones had dragged the struggling youth to shallow water and released his hold on him when the boy saw his father still beyond his depth.

"Oh my daddy," he screamed, and before the exhausted Jones could prevent him had plunged back into the pond to die. His younger brother, Cecil, 8, was the third victim.

Jones, who is 22, was pulled from the water by Ethel May Pease, 20, who had accompanied him to the pond.

They said the two boys, playing in shallow water at the edge of the pond, slipped into a deep channel which runs through it. The father, 57-years-old, plunged into the water in a rescue attempt. Jones and Miss Pease saw the affair from the other side of the pond and Jones also dived in, crossing the pond to reach the older boy.

The father had grappled with Cecil and was attempting to drag him into shallow water. Jones, although a strong swimmer, was exhausted when he reached shore with the older child and was unable to prevent the boy from rushing back toward his father. Tiller, struggling with the younger boy, was beyond the reach of Jones.

All three bodies were recovered.

Dual Battles On Holding Bill Face Congress

Senate to Act on 'Death Clause' as House Opens Lobbying Probe.

go into the activities of both the utility and Administration lobbies. Among witnesses who may be summoned are Emil Hurja, Administration patronage dispenser; Charles West, White House liaison man, and representatives of various utility interests.

In the Senate an effort will be made to adopt the Black resolution, which provides that the proposed $150,000 expenditure for a lobbying investigation should include not only the lobbies on both sides of the utility question, but also lobbying in general.

Representative Hamilton Fish (Republican), New York, demanded yesterday that "Congress put an end to the dictation by the White House and its agents over legislation." He accused the Administration of "bullying and coercing" members of Congress.

While the Rules Committee is opening its lobby investigation, the House will take up the Tennessee Valley Authority bill, over which a bitter fight is expected.

Representative May (Democrat), Kentucky, declared that the main issue involved in the TVA legislation "is the good faith and honesty of Congress, and whether Congress is the master of the TVA or its servant, and whether the House takes orders or gives orders."

"To those who believe, and I do," May said in his statement, "that the TVA is dangerous socialistic and economic folly and worse, and that in many respects it is violative of our Constitution and in all respects is repugnant to our principles of government, no TVA bill, short of one that required its liquidation, would be a good bill. Since that is not yet within the realm of political possibility and a majority of the Congress appear to favor further legislation for the TVA, it is of the highest importance and significance to see clearly and appreciate the major issue which is now presented to the House by the TVA bill now before it."

May said he believed the bill as it is to be considered by the House broadens the TVA charter. He said it "seemingly should be applauded to the skies by the most fanatical TVA-ites."

May said the Tennessee Valley Authority is opposing the bill "because it makes TVA finances subject to the same audit and control of the Comptroller General as is imposed on other Government agencies, and looks to a less dishonest power yardstick by requiring the TVA to conform to a uniform cost accounting system, to be prescribed by the Federal Power Commission."

"What is retarded except deceit and confiscation and tyranny?" he asked.

Coal Bill Fight Due.

Spurred by the coal-bill fight due, President Roosevelt's insistance upon passage of the Guffey coal bill, the House Ways and Means Committee is expected to push consideration of the measure, designed to form a "little NRA" for the bituminous coal industry. This measure, frankly questionable as to its constitutionality, is expected to be bitterly attacked in the House. If it is passed it is expected to be contested immediately by a group of coal producers who have fought it from the beginning. It has the active support of the United Mine Workers of America. The same committee also is working on alcohol control and tax legislation.

The House Banking Committee will hold a hearing this week on the bill requested by President Roosevelt to block suits growing out of cancellation of the gold clause in Government bonds.

Representative Lemke (Republican), North Dakota, in a radio appeal for passage of the Frazier-Lemke refinancing bill, declared that "the people's will must and shall triumph over the power of the international coupon clippers." He appealed to his listeners to telegraph and write to members of Congress asking them to support the bill.

Representative Fish again injected the bonus into the muddled congressional situation by announcing he will file a discharge petition in the House today seeking to froce a vote on his resolution providing that the bonus be paid from the $4,000,000,000 works fund. The Fish petition would require signatures of 216 members to bring the resolution to the floor of the House for a vote.

"It is apparent that the only contract that the New Deal Administration holds sacred and insists on keeping to the last pound of flesh is that with the veterans, in spite of the overwhelming sentiment in Congress and throughout the country for immediate payment," Fish said.

Between You and Me

By Raymond Clapper

As previously pointed out here, the policy of the Administration regarding legislation of uncertain constitutionality is to insist upon enactment and let the courts decide it. Following that policy President Roosevelt has intervened to save the Guffey coal bill.

The House Ways and Means sub-committee was so uncertain of its constitutionality that it hesitated to report out the measure. Attorney General Cummings was called before the committee and questioned as to the constitutionality of the bill. He declined to commit himself and urged that the bill be passed so that the courts could rule on it. Backing up this suggestion, President Roosevelt himself has written the committee saying that the measure should not be blocked by constitutional doubts, however reasonable.

* * *

Such procedure encourages legislative irresponsibility, and is an invitation to Congress to pass responsibility for sound legislation to the courts. It leads to taking chances in matters of great importance to large numbers of persons and to months of uncertainty over the legality of the legislation and with the possibility, not so remote either, of having the Supreme Court a year or two after the damage has been done to declare it was all a mistake.

Yet under our forms of legal procedure there is little else that can be done, unjust, costly, wasteful and confusing as it is.

A practical remedy which some of the most eminent legal authorities regard as entirely sound, would be to expand the principle of declaratory judgments, permitting a court ruling before the damage has been done, and making it unnecessary for a citizen to risk going to jail for violation of the law in order have the statute tested in the courts.

Representative John H. Tolan, of California, a lawyer of 30 years experience, has proposed a constitutional amendment which provides that:

The President, or either house of Congress, at any time may require from the Supreme Court an opinion upon the constitutionality of any act passed by Congress, and the Supreme Court shall render such opinion in writing."

That would make possible a judicial veto immediately instead of one or two years after the law has been in operation.

Tolan says two similar proposals were considered in the constitutional convention and rejected. Seven States, he says, have provisions for advisory opinions in their constitutions. Five States have provided for such procedure by statute and in a number of others advisory opinions are occasionally obtained informally.

Nearly 100 cases have been filed recently challenging the collection of AAA processing taxes which has been going on for two years. Some of these suits ask refunds. More than $800,000,000 already collected is involved. To attempt to untangle these revenues and refund them when as a matter of fact much of the tax has been passed on to consumers or farmers would only add to the confusion and aggravate the injustices complained of. These cases alone demonstrate the ridiculousness of the present procedure.

Compared with Mussolini, those old-time Romans didn't have the stuff. When the ancient Caesars were preparing a fresh conquest, they were apt to be upset by an ill-omen. It even reached the point where a plan could be upset by faking a bad omen, as happened in one carefully planned affair. Everything was set, but at the zero hour frantic word was brought to headquarters that the standards on which the imperial eagles were mounted could not be pulled from the ground. The gods obviously were against the venture and it was called off. Subsequent investigation showed that persons opposed to the expedition had fastened the standards in the ground so that they could not be pulled up.

Mussolini isn't bothered by such signs. Flying to Salerno to speed his troops to Ethiopia his plane was struck by lightning. That would have convinced an ancient Roman that the gods were displeased and the business would have been abandoned forthwith. But Mussolini, undaunted, climbed on a cannon and declared Italy had decided irretrievably on a struggle and would not turn back.

The disheartening thing about the Ethiopian situation is that the great European powers are so unwilling or unable to prevent this raid that the king of kings in his desperation must appeal to the United States for help.

Twenty years ago we had an idea that we could, by having good intentions, save the rest of the benighted world. This time we are attempting little more than to take our citizens out of the danger zone. It is not a particularly heroic step perhaps to hustle Americans out of the firing line, but it its more sensible than, with a great Messianic hurrah, to send another A. E. F. into it.

In face of continuing deficits the Government is able to borrow money at extremely low rates. It is about to offer $500,000,000 in notes with a maturity of four years and five months. On such money it will pay 1⅛ per cent interest. On shorter term money it is paying less than 1 per cent, practically getting it for nothing.

At first glance it seems contradictory that a government which is going deeper into red ink each year should be able to borrow at lower interest rates than ever before. The answer, however, lies largely in the fact that an unprecedented supply of unused money and credit are available.

Federal Reserve member bank reserve balances have expanded $1,000,000,000 in the last six months. These reserves, which form the base of credit, are largely unused. The National City Bank in its monthly review says that if, on the basis of existing reserves, credit were to be expanded to the ratio which prevailed between 1925 and 1931, resulting deposits in Federal Reserve member banks would amount to $75,000,000,000, or more than twice as large as during the 1929 boom.

In other words the material for a vast boom is at hand, but nobody seems willing to spend except the Government.

* * *

In announcing the new $250,000,000 note issue, Undersecretary of Treasury Coolidge said that the purpose was to replenish the Government's ready cash drawer which was getting low. He said only about $488,000,000 was on hand to meet current expenses.

"That seems like a lot of money," he said, "but in these times it doesn't go very far."

Not when, in the first three days of the new fiscal year, which has just begun, the Government takes in $39,000,000 and spends $287,000,000.

3d Party Group Decides to Call For Candidates

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, July 7.—The American Commonwealth Political Federation today was charged with the task of completing the structure of a "third party" dedicated to a fight for a "new economic order" on the national political battle front.

Organized yesterday amid considerable bickering at the closing session of a two-day conference of self-proclaimed "liberals," the federation adopted a 13-point "platform" stressing "production for use," as opposed to production for profit. It demanded also a sharing of the general wealth.

Armed with a set of national officers, an executive committee and the other necessary accountrements, it proposed the organization of adherents to its program throughout the land. The executive group was authorized by the conference to call a nominating convention later in the year.

Representative Thomas R. Amlie, Wisconsin Progressive, who was named chairman of the federation at the meeting from which two delegates withdrew, protesting a new party project was "premature," declared today there was a strong demand "between the Alleghanies and the Rockies" for a "new social order."

He said the federation probably also would pick up some strength among followers of Upton Sinclair.

The bolters from the conference were Representative Vito Marcantonio, New York Republican, who was one of the five Congressmen signing the call for the gathering, and Hyman Glickstein, "Knickerbocker" Democratic leader.

As to who might be the federation's presidential candidate, Amlie, for whom some support for the honor developed, commented cryptically:

"There are eight or nine men in Congress who believe in the 'platform,' but only two or three would care to risk their political future by running under a third party banner."

Party Will Demand $2,500 Yearly for All

By the Associated Press.

Omaha, Nebr., July 7.—An annual income of $2,500 for every American family will be demanded in the platform of the National Farmer-Labor Party, Roy M. Harrop, its chairman, predicted today.

The convention of the party opens tomorrow.

"All present redistribution of wealth programs don't go far enough," said Harrop. "The plan which will be proposed at this convention will make money the servant and not the master of mankind.

"We propose to raise the American standard of living from its present condition of poverty to a point where every American family will be guaranteed a return of at least $2,500 a year."

The convention will last five days, Harrop said, and will nominate a presidential candidate in sympathy with its share-the-wealth plank. Thirty State chairmen of the party already have approved the idea intended to level off pyramided riches and give "the little fellow a chance," Harrop added.

United States Senator Huey P. Long, of Louisiana, will probably be the party's candidate for President, Harrop said, adding he had heard the Kentucky delegation, expected Tuesday morning, would present the name of the Louisiana Democrat.

French Flier Breaks Record in Light Plane

Angers, France, July 7 (U.P.).—Maurice Arnoux today broke the world record for light land planes over the 1,000-kilometer course (621 miles) with an average speed of 292.825 kilometers (181.844 miles) per hour. Using a Cudron Rafale plane, Arnoux flew in the 12-hour international Angers air race.

Taking off after refueling, Jacques Puget, 39, noted aviator, and his passenger, M. Guingot, were killed instantly when their plane crashed. Puget was a pioneer flier.

'Poisoned Drink' Slayer Waits Word on Pardon

Jackson, Miss., July 7 (AP).—Prison, suspension of sentence or pardon hung in the balance tonight for Dr. Sarah Ruth Dean, of Greenwood, under life sentence for the "poisoned highball slaying" of her clinical associate, Dr. John Preston Kennedy, two years ago.

The decision, which must be made by tomorrow if it is to prevent the child specialist's return to prison, rested with Gov. Sennett Conner, to whom she took her plea for a pardon when the supreme court upheld her conviction.

All Kansas Farmers Removed From Relief by Rain and State

By the Associated Press.

Topeka, Kans., July 7.—Rain and the State Homestead Rehabilitation Corporation have removed all Kansas farm owners from relief rolls.

Crops and live stock thrive with adequate moisture after five dry years capped this spring for severe dust storms.

Of 16,000 drought-stricken and discouraged rural families sustained last fall by public funds, 6,000 had won their way back to economic normalcy today and 10,000 others were headed for that goal under the impetus of loans and expert advice from the rehibilitation corporation, directed by Raub Snyder.

"The usual loan," Snyder said, "is made upon a man's present assets. Under recent difficult economic conditions many a farmer was solvent, but not liquid—he had assets he couldn't borrow further on. These loans are based upon the future."

The 10,000 families have been advanced an average of $485 on a 12-month budget, to be repaid over a varying period with 5 per cent interest. It is expected to care for all requirements—food, seed, work stock, implements and repairs.

Assessed Value Of FairfaxLand Rises Slightly

FAIRFAX BUREAU OF THE POST.
P. O. Box 248, Fairfax, Va.
Phone Clarendon 126-J.

James U. Kincheloe, commissioner of revenue for Fairfax County, has completed his land records for the 1935 tax year. His report shows that the assessed valaution of real estate in the county for the present tax year shows an increase of $155,350 over the 1934 tax year.

The assessed value for 1934 was $11,607,445 and for the current year the valuation is $11,762,795.

During the present year the real estate owners will pay $16,084.30 more in taxes than they did last year. This year the total real estate levy will be $233,266.30, compared with 217,182 for last year. This large increase in taxes over the increase in assessed valuation is caused by a slight increase in tax rates in the magisterial districts and incorporated towns. The actual assessed valuation of the land itself is $6,478,962, which is practically the same as last year. However, improvements to the land are assessed at $5,324,265, which accounts for the major portion of the increased valuation.

Acreage Shrinks.

The creation of new subdivisions when property becomes lots instead of acreage and new surveys of land which often show a smaller acreage than has been carried on the tax books accounts for the decrease in the total acreage of the county. In 1934 the real estate recapitulation showed 239,421 acres, while this year it lists 238,615, a decrease of 806 acres.

Providence magisterial district again leads the county in the assessed valuation and the tax on real estate that will be paid from the several districts. Its total valuation, exclusive of incorporated towns, is $3,168,710, on which a tax of $55,135.55 has been levied. Mount Vernon district is second with a valuation of $2,406,809, having a total tax of $43,081.88.

The assessed valuation of real estate in other districts and the tax owners are scheduled to pay is:

Incorporated Rates.

Centerville district valuation, $877,665; tax, $13,954.88; Dranesville district valuation, $1,152,258; tax, $33,876.24; Falls Church district valuation, $1,594,765; tax, $36,520.12, and Lee district valuation, $690,689; tax, $10,981.95.

Similar figures for the incorporated towns are: Clifton, valuation $51,380, tax $816.94; Fairfax, $361,518, tax $6,290.41; Falls Church, valuation $784,799, tax $16,480.78; Herndon, valuation $373,405, tax $10,978.11; Vienna, valuation $256,317, tax $4,459.92, and West Falls Church, valuation $44,485, tax $689.52.

The total assessed valuation of real estate in the magisterial districts is listed at $9,890,891, with a total tax of $193,550.62, and in the incorporated towns the valuation is $1,871,904 and the tax $39,715.68. Tax rates that are to be in effect on real estate and tangible personal property for the current year in the magisterial districts are: Centerville, $1.59; Dranesville, $2.94; Falls Church, $2.29; Lee, $1.59; Mount Vernon, $1.79, and Providence, $1.74.

In incorporated towns the rates are exclusive of any special rates laid by the town council. They are: Clifton, $1.59; Fairfax, $1.74; Falls Church, $2.10; Herndon, $2.94; Vienna, $1.74, and West Falls Church, $1.55.

1936 Wheat Contracts Ready in Maryland

Contracts for 1936 wheat acreage adjustment soon will be forwarded to Maryland growers, according to Dr. T. B. Symons, head of the University of Maryland extension service.

Dr. Symons said that details of the agreements were completed at a conference of representatives of wheat producers with officials of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration recently at Washington. Suggestions of the local control associations will be followed by AAA officials in drawing up the contracts, it was announced.

Flood-Control Leaders Call Meeting for Bladensburg

Civic Committee to Study Way to Satisfy All Federal Demands.

A meeting of the flood control committee of the Prince Georges County (Md.) Federation of Citizens Associations will be held tomorrow night at the Bladensburg firehouse to study flood elimination steps in the suburban area.

John S. White, committee chairman, has been informed by Federal officials that a local agency must assume responsibility for several phases of the work, including maintenance after it is completed.

The State roads commission, the county commissioners and the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission will be consulted this week to ascertain which of them has the legal authority and is willing to co-operate along the lines required by the Government.

State Aid Demanded.

Officials of the United States Army Engineers' office have informed White that it will be necessary for State agencies to procure all necessary rights of way and protection of the Federal Government from damage suits.

Two plans for flood control in the Bladensburg area have been worked out by Army engineers. One of them, designated as Plan B, had the indorsement of the citizens' federation when, through White, it filed an application for $200,000 for flood control with the National Emergency Council last month. The application has been referred to the engineers' office, which will resurvey.

In view of the limitations surrounding expenditures of Federal funds on the project and the needed co-operation of Maryland authorities, White said the citizens would seek to have the floods controlled through a combination of Plan B with Plan A.

Plans as Consolidated.

The consolidated plan would eliminate projected work in Edmonston and East Hyattsville, where it would be necessary to obtain rights of way from private property owners. It would start the control work at the intersection of the Northwest and Northeast branches in Bladensburg, and involve dredging and levee construction from that point to the Anacostia River, inside the District of Columbia.

Maintenance work, which some State or county agency would be called upon to handle, would involve little expense, according to White. It would consist chiefly of inspection of the levees and painting of flood gates.

At tomorrow's meeting citizens will be asked to use their influence to persuade property owners to cooperate in the work, through donation of necessary rights of way, in the interest of the best development of the community.

Farmers Hear Rural Electric Plan for County

Prince Georges Informed Study of Possibilities Is Being Made.

Methods of extending the use of electricity into rural areas of the county were discussed at a meeting of the Prince Georges County Farm Bureau Saturday night at Baden.

Prof. Albert V. Krewatch, of the University of Maryland extension service, explained to approximately 100 farmers attending the efforts being made by the Rural Electrification Administration to make possible a wider use of current at lower rates in country areas.

Krewatch stated the extension service was completing a study of possible power lines in the county. Utility companies will be asked to co-operate in making rates on electricity as low as possible. It is planned to have the farm groups obtain all rights of way to decrease the cost.

C. E. Wise, jr., secretary-treasurer of the Maryland Farm Bureau, explained the State poultry program and also the efforts that were being made to keep up the price of Maryland wheat. He said that the export surplus in the Pacific Northwest of white winter wheat was proving a threat to prices received by growers in the State.

Attempts are being made by southern Maryland counties to have reciprocal trade agreements arranged with France for the barter of Maryland tobacco, it was announced by Joseph H. Blandford, of Brandywine. The Agricultural Adjustment Administration and the State Department will be urged to promote such agreements, Blandford stated.

The meeting was presided over by W. R. C. Connick, former principal of the Baden Agricultural High School.

Large Pea Crop Due in Maryland

Yield, of High Quality, Will Exceed Average.

The Maryland pea crop will equal that of 1934 and will exceed the average yield of the last ten years, according to Herman A. Hunter, canning crops specialist of the University of Maryland Extension Service.

In quality the crop this season will be higher than last year and above the average. Favorably cool weather during the harvesting season enabled growers to gather their crop in fine condition, Hunter stated.

As to the market outlook for the product, Hunter said future sales were at a fair price, although spot sales have dropped to an unsatisfactory level. He pointed out that conditions in Midwest States are not favorable, because of heavy infestation with aphids. As a consequence, he believes canners are justified in expecting higher spot prices to prevail shortly.

Veteran's Unit Opens Session At Alexandria

Va. Spanish War Group Holds Memorial Program at Elks Home.

THE WASHINGTON POST BUREAU.
907 Prince St., Alexandria, Va.
Phone Alexandria 523.

The twenty-seventh annual convention of the Department of Virginia, United Spanish War Veterans, was opened last night with a memorial service in the Elks Home, with Commonwealth's Attorney Albert V. Bryan as speaker. Approximately 800 veterans and members of the auxiliary will attend the convention, which will close Tuesday afternoon.

The exercises were opened by the singing of "America" by the audience. The invocation and benediction were by the department chaplain, Mrs. Nellie Webb, of Richmond. The program included vocal solos by Mrs. Fred Lane McGriffin and Miss Gretta Ludwig, roll call of the camps and auxiliaries and selections by the orchestra. Commander Charles B. Emmons of Maj. James E. King Camp, Alexandria, presided.

Mr. Bryan declared the need for organizations such as the Spanish War Veterans is pressing at present to combat the various "isms" which have sprung up.

The stage was decorated with an illuminated memorial cross, surmounting a representation of a tomb. Four flower girls, Barbara Ann Coffey, Phyllis Belew, Edith L. Saul and Elva Johnson, strewed flowers before the cross as the audience sang "Auld Lang Syne."

A joint session of the camps and auxiliaries will open at 9:30 a. m. today in the Elks Hall. An address of welcome will be delivered by Mayor E. C. Davison, of Alexandria, with a response by Department Commander George W. Cummings. There also will be an address of the auxiliary by Department President Mrs. Agnes V. Rooney, greetings from the Army by Maj. Dean Hudnutt, from the Navy by a speaker to be announced, from the Marine Corps by Maj. James D. McLean, from the Red Cross by Neville G. Hall; a message from the President, by Arthur G. Orme, national chief of staff; a talk by Mrs. Anna Nagle, national auxiliary president; the American Legion, by Department Commander Robert L. Insko; the Veterans of Foreign Wars, by a local representative; the Disabled American Veterans, by Department Commander Alexander W. Bellony.

The principal address will be by Representative Howard W. Smith, of the Eighth Virginia District.

The business session will recess at 1 p. m., and after luncheon the delegates will be taken to Washington to attend the sessions of the Senate and House of Representatives, leaving the George Mason Hotel at 2 p. m.

The delegates of the auxiliary will be taken on a sightseeing trip after the morning meeting. Buses will leave from the George Mason Hotel.

At 7 o'clock tonight the annual banquet be held in the George Mason Hotel. This will be followed by a dance.

John E. Grisemer is chairman of the committee on arrangements, with Louis L. Armistead, Richard T. Davis, William M. King, Dr. Thomas B. Cochran and Joseph B. Ewald as assistants. The reception committee is comopsed of Roy S. Warring, chairman; Rudolph Norris, Mauchlin Nivin, Russell B. Crouch and John Hillery; program and music committee, Charles B. Emmons, chairman; William M. King, John E. Grisemer and John Morris; auxiliary, Mrs. Florence M. Hillery, chairman; Lucy M. Graves, Myrtle R. Wilson, Mary J. Belew, Emma Johnston, Minnie L. Kelly, Mildred E. Peyton and Edith Mumford; auxiliary pages, Margaret M. Tyler and Nannie Bryan.

The A. B. & A. Transit Co. has granted a 10 per cent increase in pay to its employes and in addition will maintain the bus code. This action, according to Robert L. May, president, was taken to offset the increased cost of living, rather than permit his employes to work more hours per day than provided in the bus code.

The Alexandria Music Study League, with Gustav Adolphe Lehman, barytone, as guest conductor, will give a program tomorrow at 8 p. m. in the Methodist Episcopal Church South. Refreshments will be served.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Cumberland, Md., July 7.—Acquisition of the Cumberland plant of the Kelly-Springfield Tire Co. by Goodyear is expected to result in resumption of normal schedules at the factory, which now has approximately 1,000 persons employed.

Plant officials expressed the opinion that the force at the plant will be at least 2,000 within a few months after August 5, when the Goodyear company takes charge. The normal pay roll at the factory lists about 1,800, but during peak production, several years ago, the employes exceeded 3,500.

The Kelly-Springfield plant was completed about 15 years ago and is regarded as a model factory, with modern equipment and construction. More than $12,000,000 was spent in building and equipping the plant.

Mrs. Vanderbilt was reported several years ago to be worth $11,000,000 in her own right, of which $5,000,000 was her share of her father's fortune and $6,000,000 a legacy of her sister. She used her wealth to entertain lavishly and support a number of charitable enterprises.

Known as "Birdie" to her intimates, Mrs. Vanderbilt presided for many years over an elaborate estate on Long Island. She had a private nine-hole golf course on her grounds which Gene Sarazen opened with an exhibition.

The best known horse of her Fair Stables she named Sarazen, after the golfer. She disposed of her stables and country place in recent years, however, and confined her activities to her home in town.

Most striking of her social service was her work during the war, when she and other society women fitted up a freight car as a cannery and went about the country instructing housewives in food conservation.

Tobacco Firm Opens Warfare On Process Tax

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 7.—Smoke from the battle of cigarette prices and taxes is getting in the eyes of tobacco men who are laboring for a settlement before the new 1935 crop comes to market this fall.

A thrust against Federal processing taxes under the agricultural adjustment act has been taken by Clay Williams, vice chairman of the board of R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Co. and former NRA executive, who claimed continuation of processing taxes will cost growers $15,000,000.

Future status of the tax was forecast by Standard Statistics Co. in a survey which found that, "although some reduction in processing taxes is possible on October 1, 1935, early abolition of the levy or substantial relief ther from appears unlikely."

Williams computed the loss to growers on the theory that tobacco buyers in the market this fall would hold out 4.2 cents a pound, the amount of the tax, from the total amount available for purchasing tobacco, the fund to be paid to the Government if the processing taxes are continued.

He said that the growers would recover the tax in benefit payments on the 40 per cent of the crop sold in domestic markets, but lose on the 60 per cent of the crop which would be exported at lower prices and which is under no processing tax.

The demand for cigarettes has stepped up this year. The Standard Survey found that "indications" now point to sufficient gains this year to permit the leading brands approximately to equal 1930 high totals. For the industry as a whole, an 8 per cent gain for the full year 1935 to a new high level of approximately 135,600,000,000 of cigarettes, seem in prospect."

The remarkable climb in prices from 8.5 cents a pound for flue-cured in 1931 to 15.3 in 1933 and 27 in 1934 does not appear likely to continue for this year, analysts declare. It has been pointed that the 1935 crop might well average 20 cents a pound.

Majority of Editors Oppose Administration

New York, July 7.—Opposition to the New Deal by the newspaper industry is becoming more pronounced according to the latest compilation in the current poll by Newsdom.

Opinions from 1,783 editors and publishers from every section of the country show 51.5 per cent opposed to the Administration program, with 32 per cent favoring and 16.5 per cent accepting with restrictive reservations.

Iron Ore Shipments Gain.

Cleveland, July 7, (AP).—Iron ore shipments from upper Great Lakes ports in the first six months of 1935 totaled 8,145,493 tons, an increase over the corresponding period in 1934 of 1,054,108 tons.

$75,000,000 Sought But Is Not Needed

By the United Press.

Albany, N. Y., July 7.—An issue of $75,000,000 New York State short-term notes will be sold tomorrow at his office in New York City Comptroller Morris S. Tremaine announced today. The comptroller said New York was "not in any immediate need of cash but owing to exceptionally favorable conditions in the money market," he had decided to offer the notes this week.

Steel Capacity Down 6 Points To 31 Per Cent

Cleveland, Ohio, July 7.—A rebound to at least 35 per cent is expected in steelworks operations this week, following the artificial low consequent to holiday suspensions last week, when the rate dropped 6 points to 31 per cent, states the magazine Steel.

In every district except New England and Youngstown production is scheduled to regain all its losses this week, and at Pittsburgh there will be an increase.

Sharp as was this midsummer recession, with many open hearths down for the entire week, and a majority of finishing mills idle several days, ingot production still was 9 points above that in the comparable period last year. Then the steel rate declined from 46 to 22 per cent, and in the ensuing week recovered only to 30 per cent.

The third quarter, therefore, begins under more favorable conditions, and steelmakers, taking a long-range view of the markets, appear impressed with prospects which lie just ahead.

A factor for strength is the increasing interest manifested by steelmakers in scrap, and the firmness of prices, as scrap dealers are loath to part with supplies. A valley steelworks is reported to have purchased 40,000 to 50,000 tons. Dealers' and consumers' stocks are estimated as 30 to 40 per cent less than at this time last year.

Temporarily, too, automobile assemblies also made a sharp dip, to 59,000 for the week, down 30,000. The retail market for automobiles is proving much stronger than anticipated, and this has led makers to slow down programs for introducing new models. Some will not start until September 1, or 30 days later than they had planned.

Steelmakers look for substantial releases of new models by August 10, but these may be deferred. In the meantime, General Motors and others have placed additional orders for materials for present models. Chrysler's contract with Midland Steel Products Co. for frames will benefit a Cleveland strip producer by at least 30,000 tons, although this is a variable, depending up actual releases for new cars.

Shape awards for the week totaled 20,800 tons. The Mississippi Valley Barge Lines Co., St. Louis, is to close this week on barges requiring 10,000 tons of plates.

New York placed a $19,220,000 order for 500 subway cars. Final figures on June freight car awards total 5,151, bringing the number for the first six months to 6,333, compared with 23,259 in the period last year.

Northwestern Life Gains 15 Per Cent

Minneapolis, July 7.—A gain of 15 per cent over the corresponding period of 1934 is shown in sales of new life insurance, not including group, for the quarter ended June 30, by the Northwestern National Life Insurance Co. of Minneapolis.

New business for June was $4,378,450, an increase of 11 per cent over the June, 1934, figure of $3,948,407, the company reports. For the three months ended June 30 sales were $15,903,586, an increase of 28 per cent over the preceding quarter's business of $12,409,639, and of 15 per cent over the quarter ended June 30, 1934.

293,201 New Autos Registered in May

New York, July 7, (AP).—Registration of new passenger cars in the United States during May totaled 293,201 units, a decrease of 8.57 per cent under the April figure of 319,652, which was the peak for the year, according to statistics prepared by R. L. Polk & Co. in May, 1934, registrations totaled 219,225.

Premier Bonds At Highest Peak In This Century

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, July 7.—By bidding high grade corporate bonds up to the highest prices of the century, and industrial shares to the best average level since 1931, Wall Street has expressed fresh confidence in recovery.

Investment experts agree that the force of idle captial seeking employment has been the chief factor in the rise, but they say it would not have worked without confidence that the major business cycle was definitely swinging upward.

Furthermore, financial analysts noted with considerable enthusiasm last week that the usual midyear slump in industrial production was developing with distinctly less severity this year than last.

The business and financial picture remained somewhat spotty, railroad securities have lagged, with many important systems still failing to earn their fixed charges, and additional reorganizations looming, barring substantial increase in freight movement. Some lines of business are still badgered by price uncertainties as result of removal of the codes.

Nonetheless, the past week's business news and surveys brought increasing indications and expressions of opinion that laggard lines were bumping bottom. Steel production, after declining for several weeks, was expected to turn upward this week. Steel estimated last week's low, partly reflecting the Independence Day holiday, at 31 per cent of capacity, and looked for a rebound to 35 per cent this week. At this time last year production slumped to 23 per cent of capacity.

Some Wall Street commentators saw further signs that business and finance were developing increasing resistance to political and legislative worries. Washington developments of the past week pleased conservatives in that the House refused to accept the "death sentence" for utility holding companies, and the Senate Banking Committee reported a greatly modified banking bill. Utility stocks and bonds and bank stocks advanced.

273,558 Less Surplus Cars

Class I railroads on June 14 had 273,558 surplus freight cars in good repair and immediately available for service, the Association of American Railroads announced yesterday.

This was a decrease of 31,660 cars, compared with May 31, at which time there were 305,218 surplus freight cars.

Surplus coal cars on June 14 totaled 41,868, a decrease of 26,348 cars below the previous period, while surplus box cars totaled 185,784, a decrease of 2,899 cars, compared with May 31.

Reports also showed 29,180 surplus stock cars, an increase of 687, compared with May 31, while surplus refrigerator cars totaled 6,189, a decrease of 2,468 for the same period.

$78,245,000 in Bonds Called by Utilities

New York, July 7.—Public utility bond redemptions, of which there were six entire issues which totaled $78,245,000, featured last week's announcements of bonds called for payment before their dates of maturity. In addition, there were various industrial bonds in large amounts called for payment in future months and some small lots of municipal securities for retirement this month.

The total of calls for July is now $442,438,000, compared with $206,269,000 in June and $80,579,000 in July a year ago, at corresponding dates.

Ohio Water Service Co. Seeks Reorganization

Cleveland, Ohio, July 7.—The Ohio Water Service Co. has filed its reorganization plan in connection with proceedings under section 77(b), pending before the United States District Court, Northern Division of Ohio.

Upon the completion of the reorganization as proposed, the company would have outsanding between 40,517 and 40,547 shares of common stock, no preferred stock, and $3,820,000 of first-mortgage bonds. Acceptances of the plan must be filed before July 31.

Five States Have Enacted Bills For Unemployment Insurance

New York System Will Go Into Effect March 1, but the Others Await Federal Legislation; Bills Were Proposed in 32 States.

New York, July 7.—Significant developments in the field of social and industrial legislation enacted to July 1, 1935, in the 45 States which have held special or regular sessions since the beginnnig of the year are analyzed by the National Industrial Conference Board in a study entitled "Recent State Labor Legislation" to be made public tomorrow.

Although unemployment insurance bills were proposed in 32 States, only five States enacted such laws. They were New York, California, Utah, Washington and New Hampshire. The New York system will become operative starting with the payment of contributions on March 1, 1936.

The laws of the other four States will become effective only in the event of Federal legislation. A system of individual company reserves similar to that of Wisconsin is proposed under the Utah law. The laws of the other three States provide for the establishment of pooled-fund systems. Contributions from employes, as well as employers, are compulsory under the laws of California, Washington and New Hampshire, and may be authorized under the law of Utah. In the case of New York the burden is placed entirely on employers.

Proposed Amendment.

The proposed constitutional amendment, which would give the Congress the power "to limit, regulate and prohibit the labor of persons under 18 years of age," was ratified by four States, making a total of 24 ratifications. The States ratifying this year were Indiana, Idaho, Wyoming and Utah. The same proposed amendment was rejected by 18 States in 1935 sessions. In two of these States, New York and Rhode Island, no action had previously been taken. In six States the amendment had been previously approved by one House. The remaining ten States had all taken unfavorable action at earlier sessions.

Old age pension laws were revised in four States and new legislation was adopted in five States: Arkansas, Connecticut, Missouri, Rhode Island, and Vermont. Special sessions will be called in several States in the event that Congress enacts the proposed economic security bill.

Workmen's Law in Florida.

A workmen's compensation law was enacted in Florida and amendatory legislation liberalizing existing laws was adopted in several other states. The New York law was extended to cover all forms of occupational disease.

Legislation regulating the issuing of injunctions in labor disputes is reported to have been enacted in New York, Maryland, and North Dakota. These laws correspond to the Norris-La Guardia act enacted by Congress in 1932, and are intended to restrict the power of the courts to issue injunctions in labor cases by requiring hearings and by specifying that a restraining order may be granted only if certain specified conditions exist.

Four States, North Dakota, South Dakota, Utah, and Washington, agreed to accept the provisions of the Wagner-Peyser act providing for cooperation between the Federal Government and the States in the maintenance of an employment service.

Realty Bonds Advance 20% In Half Year

New York, July 7.—Another upward movement in real estate bond prices during the month of June has brought the market price of an average $1,000 bond up from $294 on December 31, 1934, to $353 on June 30, 1935, an increase of 20 per cent for the half-year period.

The June advance contributed 2.77 per cent to the six months' jump of 20 per cent from the average price at the beginning of the year.

These figures are based on 200 Eastern real estate bond issues, each of which were originally outstanding in amounts exceeding $500,000, and were selected by the realty investors service department of Arnott, Baker & Co., Inc., as being typical of those real estate security issues which have wide public interest. These 200 issues listed are outstanding now in an amount exceeding $512,000,000, and which it has been estimated may be held by at least 300,000 investors.

During the month of June the price advances registered by 109 of the 200 issues studied were sufficient to overcome the 45 issues which were unchanged together with the 46 issues which actually declined in price.

Pittsburgh in Lead.

The 12 Pittsburgh issues showed the largest average appreciation during the six months of 1935, while the 8 Buffalo issues advanced most in June. The 11 Boston issues showed the highest average market price at the close of the half year with the Pittsburgh issues averaging lowest in price among the various cities.

In the classification of building types, the ten theater issues were highest in price on June 30, with apartment hotels lowest. Thirty-one issues in the latter group however, showed the greatest price gain in June. The 50 issues secured by housekeeping apartment buildings have shown the most rapid price climb for the six months' period. Their gain for June was 3.2 per cent and for the year 35.9 per cent compared with the average for all types of 2.3 per cent for the month and 20.1 per cent for the half year.

From the 200 issues used for the Arnott-Baker Realty Bond Price Averages, the ten issues showing the largest price increase during June and the ten showing greatest declines follow:

Forest Credit Bank Approved By Lumbermen

President Roosevelt's indorsement yesterday of Senator Fletcher's proposed measure for forest credits, providing for a $40,000,000 forest credit bank, is intended to be an extension of the type of productive credit which the Farm Credit Act so successfully applies to agriculture, says a statement issued yesterday by the National Lumber Manufacturers Association. "It appears that this new forest credit proposal," continues the statement, "is especially sound because it avoids setting up any new credit institution by simply enlarging the scope and effectiveness of institutions existing under the farm credit act, which have a fine record of 'accomplishment.' Forestry, it is explained, is essentially a form of agriculture.

It is understood that the bill which Senator Fletcher submitted to the President has been approved by the Joint Committee of the National Article X-Forest Conservation Conference. This is a joint body of public and private foresters selected by that conference to execute the recommendations of the conference.

The collapse of NRA as an active body and the dissolution of the Lumber Code Authority has left the private conservation enterprises undertaken under the code without the support of governmental authority or assistance. It was recalled, however, that at the time Article X was being drafted by public and private representatives the former undertook on behalf of the Government to promise, among other things, that public credit would be extended to timber owners who desired to practice sustained yield management of their forests in order to finance taxes and the expenses of forest management over the long period of time in which trees grow to maturity.

Senator Fletcher feels that this proposed measure is a necessary first step in preparing the forest industries for a legislative program which President Roosevelt has indicated publicly that he desires to propose to Congress at an opportune moment. The Senator has a long record of study and experience in arranging credit for the peculiar needs of agriculture and forestry and it is particularly fitting that he should be sponsor of this bill.

Lyons to Talk On Australia With President

Premier Seeks to Expand Markets for Products From Antipodes.

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 27.—Premier Joseph Aloysius Lyons, Australia's public family man No. 1, prepared to leave tonight for Washington for a quiet chat with President Roosevelt that may mean more to his folks "down under" in a business way than riding back of King George.

First time out of Australia, the premier attended the British Empire's royal jubilee in London, rode in state after the King, talked trade, and journeyed to the United States for a talk with Roosevelt.

Premier Lyons and his genial wife stood amazed on top of the world's tallest building, before them stretching a city called home by more people than live in the entire Commonwealth of Australia, and wished their 11 children could see, too.

The premier is seeking markets for Australia in both England and America. The English, it is indicated in trade circles, were rather chilly to suggestions for bigger and better business with the Anzacs.

It has been pointed out that Lyons is faced with a different situation here. Australia exports far more to the United Kingdom than she imports from them, but it is the other way around with the United States. In polite diplomatic language, the United States would be under obligations to buy more . . . and Premier Lyons has plenty to sell.

He would like to sell wool, in which his commonwealth leads world production, and he would like to sell beef, which Australia has plenty to export. "We also export macaroni to Italy," said Mrs. Lyons.

The premier was happy today to receive a cable which told him South Australia had balanced her budget for the first time in eight years. He also is proud of his country's new deal which many years ago instituted minimum wages, maximum hours and some forms of social insurance.

20 National Banks Liquidated in June

The Comptroller of the Currency, J. F. T. O'Connor, has announced that during June, 20 insolvent national banks were liquidated, the receiverships thereof being finally closed, making a total of 85 receiverships finally closed or restored to solvency since his last annual report to Congress compiled as of October 31, 1934.

Total disbursements, including offsets allowed, to depositors and other creditors of these institutions exclusive of 71 receiverships restored to solvency, aggregated $16,585,536, or an average return of 74.33 per cent of total liabilities, while unsecured depositors alone received dividends amounting to an average of 64.59 per cent of their claims.

Bank and Insurance Stocks at Year's Top

New York, July 7.—New York City bank stocks staged a spectacular rally last week, establishing new high levels for the year and the largest aggregate gain for any week of 1935, according to records compiled by Holt, Rose & Troster. Insurance stocks in the New York City market, says the same authority, also made another year's high, continuing their steady upward progress.

Mexico's Oil Income Fades By 92 Per Cent

New York, July 7.—Reduction of the Mexican government's income from petroleum production and exports from $80,000,000 per year in 1921 to $6,400,017 in 1931 is ascribed to well-intentioned but misguided economic experimentation on the part of the Mexican government by Jose S. Noriega, former chief of the Petroleum Bureau of the Mexican government in the current issue of World Petroleum.

Senor Noriega traces the development of the Mexican petroleum industry from its phenomenal growth early in the century through its peak in 1921 when 193,397,587 barrels of 25.3 per cent of the world's annual oil production came from Mexico, through the decline that followed the "nationalization" of petroleum reserves to 1934 when 38,167,022 barrels or 2.56 per cent of the world's crude oil production came from Mexico.

One of the principal causes of the decline of Mexican production says Senor Noriega, was "the indisposition of the companies to explore for new pools under the conditions imposed.

"Among the factors which made capital feel insecure were radical nationalistic legislation, political disturbance, labor agitation, exaggerated and inconsistent taxation, and, principally, uncertainty regarding the future.

B. F. Goodrich Bars Bankers From Its Books

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 7.—The B. F. Goodrich Co., of Akron, Ohio, announces that it had denied permission to Otis & Co., bankers, and also a stockholder, to inspect its books of account in connection with the proposed Goodrich offering of $28,000,000 in 4½ per cent first mortgage bonds.

"This permission was denied," the company stated, "because the company did not consider the request a reasonable one or one which it would be in the best interest of the company or its stockholders to grant."

The Goodrich Co. declared Otis & Co. had asked to participate in the underwriting of the proposed issue, but "the Goodrich Co. decided that it was in the best interest of the company to deal with another underwriting group."

It was stated that Goodrich had decided to use audited figures as of December 31, 1934, in seeking registration of the securities under the Federal ssecurities act, "as unaudited figures might contain errors which might subject the company to severe penalties."

Preparation of audited figures of a later date, it was stated, would have involved additional expense and necessitated postponing the issue.

Proceeds from the proposed issue will be used in retiring about $21,000,000 of 6½ per cent first mortgage bonds of the company and 5½ per cent and 7 per cent obligations of a subsidiary in addition to retiring bank loans and adding cash to the company treasury, the Goodrich company announced.

Corporate Issues Involving New Capital Only 5% of Total

New York, July 7.—The volume of new security issues during the first half-year increased considerably over that of the first six months of last year, due principally to offerings for refinancing purposes and for financing municipalities, States and agencies of the United States Government, such as Federal Land Banks and Home Owners' Corporation, says the National City Bank in its July letter, which says:

A relatively small portion represented new capital raised for investment in the industries and the public utilities. While the volume of new issues has recovered materially from the low level of 1933, it is still far below that of predepression years. A summary of publicly offered issues, other than direct obligations of the United States Government, is given on the following page, based on figures for five months, as compiled by the Commercial and Financial Chronicle and preliminary figures for June.

Corporate Refunding 24 Per Cent.

"It will be seen that borrowings by municipalities, States, Government agencies, etc., accounted for about 71 per cent of new issues this year. Of the grand total, corporate refunding amounted to 24 per cent, and corporate issues involving new capital to but 5 per cent.

"The tabulation does not show the largest borrower in the market, which is the United States Government. Between January 1 and June 30 the Treasury made 45 new issues of securities, including refunding issues and exchanges, equivalent to an average issue of about $150,000,000 every four days.

Speeding The Test.

President Roosevelt's letter to Representative Hill, urging speedy action upon the Guffey coal bill, concludes with the hope that "your committee will not permit doubts as to constitutionality, however reasonable, to block the suggested legislation."

The open resentment manifested by the President over the decision in the Schechter case unfortunately makes it possible to read an ulterior motive into his present attitude. Superficially there is no room for criticism of the assertion that "a decision by the Supreme Court relative to this (Guffey bill) measure would be helpful as indicating, with increasing clarity, the constitutional limits within which this Government must operate." But this simple statement of fact can easily be interpreted as an indirect challenge to the court to do its worst and be prepared to take the consequences of an unfavorable public reaction.

If there is a suggestion of hostility or defiance in this communication, however, it lies entirely in the form rather than the substance of what is said. The constitutionality of the Guffey measure, assuming its passage, will eventually have to be passed upon by the Supreme Court, and the President rightly urges a speedy test that will serve as a general guide to future regulatory action.

While there is room for honest differences of opinion regarding the legitimacy of this particular bill, the situation is not so confused as the President seems to think. The "thousand differing legal views" that, as he says, might be obtained, may be ignored. The Department of Justice is, or should be, prepared to offer reliable advice and assistance to Congress in framing legislation that will survive tests of constitutionality. Indeed it seems a slight to the Attorney General that the President should not rely on him as a dependable authority in this field.

The limits of Federal regulatory authority under the commerce clause are indefinite and elastic. It will undoubtedly require a Supreme Court decision to decide how far Congress may proceed in extending control over coal mining in connection with interstate distribution of coal. If the Guffey bill is passed in its present form, the President admits, its constitutionality will be open to question. In case of an adverse decision, therefore, this public acknowledgement of questionable legality will prevent any horrified reaction later.

So the conjecture that the President is getting ready to challenge the authority of the Supreme Court in case it invalidates further important New Deal laws is scarcely borne out by an impartial analysis of his message. By sounding a call for speedy decisions on important regulatory issues the President has, in fact, aroused hope that many of the hampering uncertainties which impede recovery will quickly be resolved.

The Two-Dollar Bill.

Only sixteen million two-dollar bills were in circulation at the end of 1934, showing a decline of over five million units of this value in slightly over four years.

The unpopularity of two-dollar bills may be due in part to the superstition that they bring bad luck, but there are also a number of very substantial reasons for shunning them. Our system of pricing makes this denomination superfluous. The bills are an annoyance to the holder when he uses them to make purchases of less than one dollar, and they are not really needed when he makes larger outlays. Then, too, the relative scarcity of the bills leads to frequent mistakes in changing them. Some of the misfortune supposed to attach to possession of the unlucky two's is not altogether imaginary. They are much more often mistaken for ones than for fives.

The shrinking circulation of these unpopular bills is, therefore, easily explained. It is more difficult to understand why any of them are kept in circulation by the Treasury. Long experience shows that money not wanted returns speedily to the issuer. Efforts to keep silver dollars in circulation, for example, are wasted so far as the Eastern part of the country is concerned. Here, as in other respects, the West is more receptive.

As the experience of the war years proved, monetary habits can be overturned. Europeans accustomed to handle coin almost exclusive in daily transactions were compelled to accept paper and in time became reconciled to the change, or lack of change. Probably many of them now prefer the more easily portable paper to the gold and silver of former days. There is no good reason, however, for this country to issue paper money in unsuitable or unpopular denominations. It is even less sensible to try to force awkward silver coins upon people who have learned the advantages of paper money.

The Underwriting Privilege.

Sharp differences of opinion are developing over a provision inserted into the Senate banking bill by the Glass subcommittee, permitting banks to re-enter the underwriting business. Given the limitations and safeguards surrounding restoration of this privilege, the proposal as it stands would not arouse much alarm even among the most confirmed believers in a divorce of commercial from investment banking. Nevertheless, the amendment is extremely important because it authorizes the re-entry of deposits institutions into a field of investment banking closed to them under the banking law of 1933. It is easy to understand therefore, why critics of the banking bill are inclined to reserve judgment until they have had ample opportunity for discussion of the fundamental questions raised by the Glass amendment.

It can be said with conviction that the conjunction of deposit and investment banking under one management contributed in a major way to the banking disasters of recent years. It was also responsible to no small extent for the great volume of unsound foreign bond issues floated in this country with enormous losses to investors and to some issuing institutions. Through the medium of "affiliates" organized under State laws, national banks became involved in many kinds of investment and speculative activities forbidden under the national banking laws. Moreover, the banks were in a position to underwrite securities directly. As a result, many of them found their position seriously weakened when the world financial collapse came.

So long as security prices are advancing and a ready market exists for new investment offerings, bank underwriting of such issues and bank loans to "affiliates" engaged in the flotation, sale and purchase of securities may appear to be a safe and easy way of making money. But when the markets become unfavorable, and the values of securities begin to decline—when the banks are left to take losses on their holdings—the dangerous consequences of a union of commercial and investment banking become apparent.

The disclosures of the managerial weaknesses of banks engaged in the direct or indirect flotation of security issues brought a proper demand for legislation to prevent a recurrence of such evils. The result was that banks of deposit were forbidden to deal in investment securities for their own account under the banking law of 1933, and prohibited from underwriting. Security affiliates were also divorced from parent banks, and private banks and organizations engaged in a deposit business were forbidden to sell or distribute securities.

What are the reasons given for a reversal of policy at this time? The chief argument in favor of relaxing present rigid restrictions is that the change will assist American business to satisfy its legitimate capital needs. This contention has considerable weight, although at present the mere announcement of an application for the registration of a new capital issue brings requests from dealers and investors more than sufficient to absorb the new offering. However, this situation is abnormal, since the volume of new issues today is relatively small and the major proportion of offerings is for refunding purposes and hence much easier to place.

It is conceivable that, with a revival of the capital market, existing investment institutions would be unable to underwrite and handle the new issues which business desired to place, thereby hampering recovery. Apart from the public interest, however, the banks of deposit have reasons of their own for wishing to participate in the limited volume of underwriting business now available. Underwriting is easy and profitable, and especially attractive to commercial banks choked with unused funds, and confronted by artificially depressed interest rates which make it extremely difficult to earn a profit in the commercial banking field proper.

The large questions raised by the underwriting provisions of the banking bill are matters of great moment to the public at large. The problem is complicated by the liability provisions of the law controlling the underwriting and distribution of new securities.

The pros and cons of the issue should be carefully weighed before action is taken. A decision will be more easily reached if it is kept in mind that banking progress calls for an increased sense of social responsibility as well as more efficient exercise of banking functions.

The Missing Link.

The linking of Rock Creek and Potomac Parks has long been a dream of Washington's city planners. That it is about to be accomplished is a tribute to their foresight and perseverance. When this road is completed Washington will probably have the longest continuous park drive in any American city. It will certainly have one of the most beautiful of municipal pleasure grounds.

In spite of the fact that thousands of people flock to Rock Creek Park to find relief from muggy weather, parts of it are still virtually a wilderness. Even the highways that are so heavily traveled this time of year present enticingly wild vistas comparable with those found in a national park. Potomac Park, on the other hand, is an artificially built and cultivated garden. Skirting the banks of a historic river, it retains its carefully developed charm in winter as well as summer. With two park areas of such different characteristics linked by a scenic highway and bridle paths, the wealth of the Capital's outdoor recreational facilities will be immediately apparent.

The new highway will also serve to link the park system with the George Washington memorial drive. More than ever Washington will be entitled to the distinction of being a "city of parks." If comparable thought and planning were devoted to the District's schools, libraries, playgrounds in congested areas and other public institutions, the Capital City would indeed be a model municipality.

Deleting Security.

The conferees considering the social security bill have still to wrestle with the question presented by the so-called Clark amendment, under which individual employers with retirement systems of their own would be exempt from the national old-age insurance system. At first glance appearing plausible and desirable, as an encouragement to progressive employers, this amendment would actually have disastrous consequences.

The framers of the bill, in their desire to commence with a low tax rate and simultaneously to pay respectable benefits as early as 1942, provided unearned annuities for workers now in middle age or older. We have already expressed the opinion that this was an unfortunate blunder. If social insurance is to work successfully it must conform with tested actuarial principles. Nevertheless, juggling in behalf of beneficiaries in the higher age classes has been approved by both houses of Congress. The question now is whether the entire system should be made unsound and unworkable by the adoption of the Clark amendment.

The exemption of all employers with retirement systems of their own would have several very serious results. First, it would hopelessly unbalance the national old-age reserve account. An employer would find it profitable to have a separate system only with respect to his younger employes. Older workers would be thrown upon the Federal system, while all the "good risks" would be outside of it. The mere recital of the freedom of each worker to choose between the Federal plan and the private plan would not prevent discrimination against groups of older employes.

The duty of checking up on each private plan, in the second place, would necessitate the creation of a new and immense bureaucracy. And the task of following an individual's employment record back and forth between private plans and the Federal system, would impose an unbearable administrative burden upon the Social Security Board. Finally, there seems to be no dissent from the view that the inclusion of the amendment would arouse constitutional difficulties.

Much support was gained for the Clark amendment on the ground that it would protect existing retirement plans, and that it was a natural corollary to the Wisconsin type of unemployment insurance law under which each employer has a separate reserve to care for his own men. But the State unemployment funds are all to be Government-controlled, whereas a private retirement plan is wholly outside of the Government system.

The Clark amendment might help to preserve the relatively few existing plans. But its deeper significance is its tendency to destroy the whole structure of governmental old-age insurance to the detriment of those who most need protection of this type.

Belated Recognition.

It is a failing of human nature to take familiar things too much for granted, even though a real affection may be felt for them. A song, a picture, or a beloved poem, when handed down from generation to generation, assumes a traditional status that is accepted without question or concern as to its real source. Consequently the author or painter is often forgotten, if indeed he were ever known, while his work continues to live and give pleasure to all who come in contact with it.

A case in hand is that of Franz Gruber, Austrian school teacher, who died in poverty and obscurity in 1863. It was this humble man who 117 years ago gave to the world the exquisite music of "Stille Nacht, Heilige Nacht." Yet it was not until the past week that international homage was paid to his memory. The teachers of Los Angeles have sent a plaque to be placed on the composer's grave at Hallein, on which were inscribed the very appropriate words, "In honor of a teacher, for his universal message of peace and good will."

Gruber never received any money for his song nor did he realize, at the time of his death, that it was destined to be as much a part of the Yuletide legend as gifts, holly and snow. Nor would any service at such a time be complete if childish voices and church choirs failed to carol its assuring message. Yet Herr Gruber's inspiring hymn is not alone a contribution to music and the joyousness of Christmas. The underlying theme of peace on earth, good will toward men is one that carries far more than a mere esthetic or seasonal appeal. The real tragedy is that recognition of this is even more belated than that accorded the visionary composer.

Socialist Commendation.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Being a Socialist, and having little faith in any of the New Deal's frantic efforts to prop up the capitalistic system for a short while longer, I therefore wish to steer clear of the issues involved in the scrap over the utility holding company bill.

I read with dismay, however, that members of the House of Representatives were threatened with political excommunication by the White House unless they voted for the Administration's measure. Such tactics smack too strongly of bribery to suit me.

The House is certainly to be commended if—and such appears entirely probable—its members voted according to conscience, reasoning and conviction, and thereby declared their independence from unethical coercion. PLEBEIAN.

For A Different Fourth.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Over the air, out of the press and from within American hearts again comes the trite plea for a safe and sane Fourth. Likewise the diffusion of a strange desire for peace. Yet by exciting impressionable young minds with what imitates the belligerent bangs of guns and cannons of 1776, we are stimulating the horror of what preceded the original Fourth of July, rather than the glorious result attained.

So goes on an unsafe and senseless celebration, inviting danger with turbulent bomb-like explosives at the same time defying respect for the protection of the District law. Far better we air our exultant patriotism by the colorful beauty of certain night fireworks which soar to the heavens proclaiming the courage of our forefathers and the afterglow of a great victory.

Relief Criticism.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: This isn't a criticism of the President's policies, but only of the mismanagement of them. Here the FERA is a hotbed of politics. The Administration force here are mostly well-to-do people who can have no conception of the needs of reticent people outside of the habitual beggar.

New cars of late models and diamonds galore seem out of place for people working on FERA. Investigation would disclose that the poor and needy get $1.45 to $2 per week, while the investigators and office force have the best jobs they've ever had.

Constitution And The Senate.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: On July 4 I read an account of the precautions taken by the Senate in order to comply with the Constitution. The Senate went through a mock ceremony on that date so that both houses of Congress would not be in recess for more than three days in succession.

If Congress would only go to such pains as that when they were passing on certain legislation, and keep the Constitution as much in mind, the Supreme Court would have no cause to declare their laws unconstitutional.

Nominates Senator France.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The disclaimer on the part of Senator Radcliffe to any thoughts of assuming the presidency of the University of Maryland leaves the door, in a manner, ajar; for Senator Radcliffe above most persons would appreciate the need of a man of the breadth of experience and significance that one associates with an incumbent of the senatorial office.

It is natural that the thought of the writer stepped from Senator Radcliffe to former United States Senator Joseph I. France. The more understandable because, while Mr. Radcliffe defeated Dr. France, yet I know them to be quite fond of each other. Former Senator France appears to combine all of the desirable factors for a president of the University of Maryland at this time. He is a trustee of the Jacob Tome Institute; he has made addresses in many of the educational institutions and gatherings of Maryland; he is conversant with educational trends in the country and particularly with the system throughout Maryland. Then too, we have in him a physician; a scientist, experienced and successful in research; an agriculturist and specifically, a dairy farm expert.

The university needs an interpreter and a co-ordinator and an originator. It also needs a man of breadth of executive experience. In the Senate of the United States a member learns how to differ with his fellows and yet to maintain friendship and respect. That qualification so necessary now at the University of Maryland, I conceive to be of invaluable importance in the man who may be selected by the board of regents.

I am sure that this spontaneous recital of the qualifications of Dr. France will meet with response upon the part of the people generally of the State of Maryland, who know him thus. I make no distinctions as to grades and positions of individuals, their political predilections, or any other matters. I am to be understood as being responsible for this advancement of the name of our former Senator, in my own behalf, and yet I feel I am interpreting a very general attitude of mind, that with the proposal of the name of Senator France, there will be approval throughout the State. I should hope, also, within the board of regents. At any rate, it would be well worth while for Dr. France to be sounded out upon the matter.

Leaving Government.

To the Editor of the Post—Sir: Since coming to Washington two years ago, I have lost all respect for the Federal Government, which heretofore had been my ideal of all governments. I was hired to do certain work and I found that the whole system is so arranged that I am not able to use initiative, imagination, nor ability. ...

Naturally, I am not slated for promotion nor even intelligent treatment, for I was wise or foolish enough to speak out against this sham. The result of my effort is that I am arranging my affairs to get back to civil life, where I can think intelligently and speak for what seems obviously right. I refuse to become hopelessly swamped in the bureaucratic system that exists only for itself. In leaving, I express my profound sympathy for those unfortunate men and women of intelligence who must, of necessity, go on playing the idle game of sham.

An Official View Of Haiti.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Not long ago I read in your great paper an article singing the praises of the President of the Dominican Republic. That looked very fine. Now Mr. Paul Vanorden Shaw through the columns of The Post is attacking President Trujillo, and that is too bad.

It seems to me he makes it worse by attacking at the same time the President of Haiti. It is too much, indeed. I should like my first reaction to such unwarranted attack upon President Vincent to appear in your paper as well.

If Mr. Shaw, author of "Caribbean Dictators," went to Port-au-Prince with the purpose of writing his letter published today from there, I believe he made a gross mistake. The stuff and nonsense he wrote about President Vincent from Port-au-Prince could be found ready at hand here. And, for the asking, I could tell him where to apply to get it and who could supply him with all his improper remarks.

For the last few months a small number of politicians have been trying hard to make trouble in Haiti, while sending over here to some of our American friends misleading statements and reports about the situation in Haiti, especially about their own wrong-doings.

Mr. Shaw could use them. All he would have to do should be to put them under his hand and seal. He did not do that much here. He went to Port-au-Prince. Instead of making himself acquainted with all that has happened, he got in touch with a few political charlatans, he allowed himself to be imposed upon and, after a while, maybe he did not even know he was writing his article under their dictation for the sensational part of it.

That—and only that—accounts for the false facts asserted by Mr. Shaw and for his obvious distortion of the whole meaning of President Vincent's position.

If Mr. Shaw had been anxious to investigate seriously, to go to the bottom of things, instead of relying on second-hand information and mere hearsay evidence, he had the opportunity to show more respect for truth and more consideration for respectable people.

In fact, Mr. Shaw was obliged to ascertain the following main points: President Vincent began his rule with an opposition which developed more and more systematically; he was betrayed by his friends, 11 personal friends who did not want him to carry out his presidential program and systematically killed every important proposal of his government; President Vincent is zealously backed by the Haitian people, the whole people, except a few politicians; in two plebiscites held with perfect freedom in Haiti as everywhere else, the Haitian people, on February 10 and June 2, 1935, by an overwhelming majority of votes, have proclaimed President Vincent their leader and, to show their gratitude for his eminent services, have elected him for a new presidential term beginning next year.

And, let me add, that is the Haitian people's business.

ALBERT BLANCHET,
Minister of Haiti.

Even Half A Loaf

ONE of the most difficult things in the world is to loaf intelligently. One thing that makes it difficult is abundance of leisure. If you have a lot of work ahead of you and a strong distaste for it you may do a little loafing now and then and enjoy it. But if you have all week to do your loafing in it is apt to bore you.

The trouble today is that so many men have had leisure thrust upon them and don't know what to do with it. Most of them destroy it by worrying and mulling around looking for a job. More fortunate is the man who has achieved leisure. He can sit in his club and twiddle his thumbs and not even think. But happiest of all is the born loafer. He no longer has to explain why he isn't working; and if he lacks a competence he can take his handout and enjoy grumbling because it is no larger. We ought to have more born loafers. What are we studying eugenics for?

* * * *

One very curious fact in life, and one which the economist should note, is that ever so many men like their jobs and would rather work—just for the sake of working—than loaf. There is here, I think, a source of revenue which the Government has not sufficiently tapped. Why should men have this pleasure without paying for it?

Every once in a while the Government gets a glimmer of the right course to pursue and then lets some extraneous circumstance obscure its vision. Take these artists' colonies. No, you needn't take all of them. Take one. Take the one contemplated in Virginia. Word comes from Richmond that if the Government will approve a loan of $250,000 under the new Federal works program for the construction of an artist's colony the State Conservation and Development Commission is ready to develop the project. The colony would include 100 five-room studio bungalows with a community center. The work of the artists would be sold each year (this is their story) and the revenue used to pay back the loan. W. Garrett Conant, director of the National Society of American Art, says that 100 artists have already indicated that they would like to become members of the colony.

* * * *

There are some good points about this plan, but this thing of returning a Government handout is simply not done. And there is a much simpler way of managing the project. That way was indicated by the AAA before the United States Supreme Court did things to the NRA. The Government, through the AAA, paid farmers for the corn they didn't grow and the hogs they didn't raise. There's the idea. Let the Government pay the artists for the pictures they do not paint. Later on, when the artists have accumulated a competence by doing nothing, they may be permitted to paint one picture each which they will pay the Government for hanging, if hanging is not too good for it.

Do you begin to get a glimmer of the big idea? Let me clarify it for you.

In this age of power and machinery a very small proportion of the whole population can do all the necessary work in the world. Since there are ever so many more workes than we really need, some of them should be encouraged to be loafers. Now you can't expect people to be loafers unless they are well paid for it, so the Government should pay them well, with special bonuses for unusually long periods of loafing with no industrious lapses.

And how would the Government get the money? From the chronic workers, of course. A man with an urge for toil would gladly pay the Government a dollar a day for the privilege of sweeping a street and perhaps as much as $10 a day for driving a locomotive.

* * * *

Now beyond question at the beginning there will be more people wanting jobs than there will be jobs for them to do and there will be a more or less unhealthy competition to get them, some people being willing to pay as much as $2 a day for the privilege of street sweeping and $20 for the fun of driving a locomotive, and this may embarrass the Government with an excess of revenue; but indubitably this is a little matter that will straighten itself out, more and more people each year adapting themselves to a life of leisure. In a couple of generations, it may be, we shall have become a nation of thumb twiddlers.

A lot of excess money can be spent on boards of experts appointed to determine what enterprises may be considered labor and therefore call for a heavy tax and those which may be considered perfectly useless and therefore deserving of Government aid. At a guess, bridge would be considered as a kind of loafing and would therefore rate Government assistance until a point was reached when a man felt an urge to write syndicate articles. Though this perhaps cannot be considered necessary labor the very fact that a man liked to do it, even at the cost of some thought, would make it cause for a heavy tax. And the same with other sports, outdoor and indoor.

Simple, isn't it?

Misnamed.

AN ARTICLE in Sunday's papers by Mr. Ernest K. Lindley, friendly interpreter of the Administration, gives us a more comprehensive picture of the problems of the Presidency than we have had in a long time. Students have often pointed out that we are prone to expect too much of the White House, that we criticize without any idea of magnitude of the job which confronts its occupant. Periodically we have had suggestions that there really should be two Presidents. After Mr. Harding's untimely death we heard a lot to this effect.

Mr. Lindley is not attempting to arouse any sentiment for two Presidents, of course. In fact, of all the ideas which the present Administration has entertained that is not one. But he does tell of Mr. Roosevelt's plan to make a series of speeches on his trip to the Pacific Coast when and if Congress ever adjourns. It is in connection with the preparation of their speeches that we learn of the tremendous problem with which Mr. Roosevelt is faced.

* * * *

There is one school around him, says Mr. Lindley, which thinks that for the sake of business he should say that the reform wave is over and that henceforth we can proceed in an orderly way. But the other school, the Liberals, insist that he do nothing of the kind because if he gives business any assurance at all it will lose him support with the Liberals. They even got sore when he made a gesture to the bankers several months ago, it is pointed out, and while Mr. Lindley doesn't say so, it is manifest that if they got sore over this little thing that they would get very sore, indeed, if he were to give some real assurance to business.

The intimation is very plain that the Liberals are insisting that even if the reform will have been over when Congress adjourns that Mr. Roosevelt give no intimation of it, that, in fact, he thinks up something or say something to keep the Liberals' enthusiasm up. And presumably the Liberals here working for the Government will get up something else just as soon as they can to back Mr. Roosevelt up that will give him something to work on.

* * *

It is one of the most enlightening articles that one can read. It should give reassurance, too, to those people who are friendly to the Administration but who are bewildered and who try to keep their spirits up by saying "Well, he's doing the best he can."

One gets the impression from Mr. Lindley's article that the President at heart really likes business, that having lived a long time he appreciates the need of it, that experience tells him that the American Federation of Labor, the eminent Prof. Tugwell or he, himself, can't give employment to the people in this country. But he can't let this feeling escape him. The Liberals won't like it if he does. He will lose their support. That is unquestionably a dickens of a fix for a man to be in. Really I should hate to be a President and have to live with such an inhibition. Of course, Mr. Roosevelt's affection for business may not be so strong as to make his inhibition serious. But it is liable to progress and cause him no end of trouble.

* * *

No one will deny the importance of the Liberals' contention that it would be disastrous to Mr. Roosevelt to do anything to alienate them. Because it is a cinch he will get no support from the Conservatives in 1936. His only chance, as the Liberals point out, is to hold fast to the element of discontent and see that that element is not diminished but that its numbers are steadily increased. But it must be difficult for a man to do this who inwardly realizes the importance of business and would really like to help it recover.

There is little doubt that it would be a pretty mean trick on the malcontents, and one might say, the masses generally, if the President should slip business recovery over on them. They have been whipped into the state of feeling as strongly against business as do the Liberals. Mr. Roosevelt would be untrue to our democracy were he to do anything to promote business recovery with the being against it.

Incidentally, there has been considerable discussion as to how the Liberals came by their name. They just began calling themselves that and we let it go. There is a real question of whether "maniacs" would not be more appropriate.

British Election Prospects

Jubilee Spirit Thwarts Advance Of Labor Party, But Signs Still Point To Balloting In Fall While 'National' Group Still Holds Advantage.

By Edward Acheson.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

London (By Mail).

EARLY in January of this year an article in The Post outlined the probable course of British politics during 1935. The first six months have been run off according to that schedule.

The Labor Party's growing strength has been curtailed by the Jubilee spirit of "England and Empire." Mr. MacDonald stepped aside for Mr. Baldwin, the "National Government" thereby assuming a hue more closely approximating its true Tory color. And Mr. Lloyd George, as this week's "Council of Action" meeting clearly indicates, is busily fulfilling the function assigned to him—that of attempting to corner a balance-of-power in the next House of Commons.

It only remains to be seen whether the general election will be held this fall, as The Post predicted. Will the government exercise its prerogative to dissolve Parliament in the autumn? Or will the present House be permitted to live out its full legal span of five years, and seek reelection in the spring?

* * * *

TODAY, within three months of the proposed date, the reasons for a fall election seem more cogent than formerly, and arguments to the contrary, although containing some weight, will not, I believe, be able to tip the scales in favor of delay.

To America, and to the world at large, the difference of six months, one way or the other, may prove to be of considerable interest. Great Britain will not and can not enter into any sort of stabilization agreement before the election, can not even discuss with authority any plans for such an agreement. Very wisely, the National Government does not choose to risk an election with such a momentous question opened but undecided. Hence, ardent advocates of an international currency standard, and those equally passionately opposed, can adjust the time schedule of their hopes and fears in the light of Great Britain's general election.

Three months ago there were strong political arguments for delaying the election until 1936. The Labor Party's temporary eclipse, due to "that Jubilee feeling," was made unexpectedly more thorough by the sudden revelation of Germany's air supremacy. It is difficult to overestimate the shock of that realization on public opinion in this country. That darling of Labor Party oratory, collective security, suddenly seemed highly ephemeral and idealistic. The Government's policy of "Defensive Arms" soared into the ascendency. Even the very questionable value of the German Naval Limitation Agreement was transmuted into political gold.

* * * *

HOWEVER, this retardation in the Labor Party's growth has now, I believe, stopped. Lost ground is being slowly regained. Again it can be said with conviction that the longer the government waits, the more it will lose.

Against this argument is placed the possible achievements of the new cabinet. Mr. Ernest Brown, in the Ministry of Labor, has sound reasons for wanting time in which to prove himself. Its unemployment relief policy constitutes this government's signal failure. Mr. Kingsley-Wood has a tremendous unfinished program in housing which he inherited from the far less efficient Sir Hilton Young, and Sir Samuel Hoare and Mr. Eden can not in a day, or in three months, straighten out the tangled web left by Sir John Simon.

These three departments supplied most of the ammunition to the opposition guns. These three departments have received the only enhancement of talent which the new cabinet contains. The question is asked, therefore, whether the government is not going to permit these departments to set themselves in order, so that the party can present a more satisfactory record to the country. That, of course, would seem the logical thing to do. But it is axiomatic in England that no party ever won an election on its record. Attack, not defense, is the order of the day and the party with the initiative has the greatest single advantage.

* * * *

THAT the Labor Party has laid itself open to attack and that the sooner the attack is delivered, the better for the attacker—these things are generally admitted. The anti-monarch stand taken by the Socialist League, which constitutes the left wing of the Labor Party, was not only unfortunate, but tactlessly timed. Sir Stafford Cripps' remarks about "jubilee ballyhoo" (especially since the American magazine Ballyhoo has recently been the subject of a libel suit in England) afforded the Tory speakers some fine opportunities for loyalty flag-waving. To be vocally anti-King in the King's Jubilee Year is an unhappy position. And to be anti-King at a time when the King's health is subject of daily bulletins doubles the misfortune.

Externally, it would seem that the time for attack was propitious. Internally, within the cabinet itself, the chancellor of the exchequer is the chief advocate of an early election. His budget for this year will stand analysis. But what of the increased expenditure for the air force and the navy? They will have to be included in the spring, and "collective security" will have regained a great deal of its appeal to the taxpayer.

To the taxpayer, too, the dole is of peculiar interest, since he pays for it. "More people employed than ever before," is the present joyous cry of the national spokesmen. But then, there are more people than ever before, and the reverse of the coin, the unemployed figures, are not so encouraging. The present level of unemployment will, in all probability, hold up until fall. But there is no guarantee that the winter will tell the same story. And France is a wholly uncertain factor. When, and all England is saying "when," not "if," when France goes off the gold standard, what will be the effect on British trade and hence on employment? No one knows, and the uncertainty urges electoral action before another "x" is thrust into the equation.

* * * *

AND finally Mr. Lloyd George. His New Deal was at first laughed at, then considered sufficiently serious to be reviewed by a cabinet committee. Now, having been "turned down flat" by the government, the Welsh Wizard is organizing everything he can find around loose into a "council of action" for peace and reconstruction. Probably his nuisance value will prove to be far greater than his strength. But, as has been demonstrated time and time again, any three-cornered race tends to aid and abet the Labor candidates.

Political expediency therefore speeds the "National" Party to the polls while the enemy is at a self-imposed disadvantage, and before reorganization can be effected. Tipsters are prophesying that the National Party will win at a canter. At the last election it won at a walk. The Labor Party will, in any event, quadruple the number of its seats in the House, and England will have a Tory government again, but with a far more effective opposition.

However, before the event will come the inevitable retardation of business, the uncertainty in financial circles as to the behavior of the "flight money" in London, and an almost certain weakening of the pound on the foreign exchanges. To what extent this natural tendency will be allowed, or be forced, to go, lends a decided international interest to the British national elections.

Equalized Tax For All Asked By Vandenberg

not pay "the President's bills" for 60 days.

"Furthermore," he added, "such a program can not possibly satisfy our real 'wealth redistributors' whom the President apparently hopes to placate. It is not a tax program. It is not even a good soap-box formula." He said the formula "does not even flirt with a balanced budget."

Vandenberg said that while he believed in the use of inheritance taxes to achieve social objectives, there is a point past which this practice can not go.

"I should not relish, for example," he said, "the spectacle of a great motor industry which the Government takes over for inheritance taxes and delivers, let us say, to Dr. Tugwell or Jim Farley or Harry Hopkins to operate. There are some calamities which the country could not survive."

Vandenberg concluded with a suggestion that Congress adjourn and reconvene in the fall. He pointed out that none of the new taxes would be collected before next year.

"There is no gain in haste," he said. "There may be tragic loss."

Italy Rushes Plans For War in Africa

on Abyssinia with a new call to arms.

Hill trails were alive with hurrying men as petty chieftains collected their own following in groups of from 50 to 500. Warriors loaded their donkeys with rations for a month, strapped curved swords to their sides, lifted their rifles to their shoulders and went off to military encampments—after calling their servant girls to follow.

Foreigners throughout the country remained calm although United States Charge d'Affaires William P. George advised his nationals to prepare to evacuate. The 125 Americans, mostly missionaries, in Abyssinia, with few exceptions, indicated they would remain, relying upon Haile Selassie for protection.

The new army, observers said, would give a good account of itself. But the backbone remains the old feudal army. The Ethiopian is a brave fighter, but he never has opposed massed machine guns, modern artillery, airplanes, mechanical and chemical warfare. Meeting equals he is a terrible fighter, speedy and agile. He husbands amunition until sure of hitting at close quarters.

By the Associated Press.

Addis Ababa, July 7. — Huge troop-carrying planes may be used by Great Britain to evacuate British subjects from this city if war develops between Italy and Ethiopia, it is believed here.

Britain is expected to await developments before following America's lead in advising her subjects to leave Ethiopia.

If Addis Ababa should actually be endangered, the general opinion here is that Britain will fly troop planes from Aden, Arabia, land them near here, and quickly evacuate her subjects by that method.

Grace Moore In London

By

Wm. Lyon Phelps.

OUR American soprano, Grace Moore, who made such a tremendous success in the motion picture, "A Night of Love," has aroused universal interest on her visit to England. There was a big crowd to see her at the railway station.

She made her debut in London several weeks ago in Puccini's "Boheme," and the huge opera house was sold out. In an interview she said that she wished the public to regard her primarily as an opera singer, and not as a movie actress. That is to say, she quite properly regards herself as an opera prima donna who happened to make a film success, rather than as a Hollywood movie star, who entered the ranks of opera singers.

* * * *

As she stated it, in an interview for the London Telegraph, "Music and opera are substance, and the movies a shadow. Who knows what will happen to the films next year or the year after? Everything may be revolutionized, and all the pictures so far made be put into the waste-paper basket—where most of them are already. But a masterpiece of music goes on being played and sung forever. And what is a film star's career compared with a musical artists? The film star only lasts as long as her youth—and not always so long even as that. But I shall be singing when I am 65!"

On the other hand, Miss Moore might have added that by means of the film her youth and beauty and freshness of voice are preserved forever, so that audiences for many years to come will hear her at her very best.

* * * *

I am not surprised that she disliked the title, "A Night of Love." That was the only blot on one of the most beautiful motion pictures ever made. In her new picture, "On Wings of Song," which includes the whole of the first act and part of the second of "Boheme," she said in this same interview, that this charming title gives her as much pleasure "as the 'vulgar title,' 'A Night of Love,' caused her tears of mortification."

Roosevelt Returns From Fishing Trip

Lands at Annapolis After Two Days on Bay.

Tanned by the wind and sun, President Roosevelt returned to Washington last night after a weekend fishing trip on the Government yacht Sequoia.

The President landed at Annapolis after two days and a night on Chesapeake Bay and immediately left by automobile for Washington. As he landed he was greeted by several hundred persons, including most of the plebe class at the Naval Academy.

In the President's party were Senator Johnson of California, Assistant Secretary of State R. Walton Moore, his secretary, Miss Marguerite LeHand, and her twp nieces, Misses Marguerite and Barbara Farwell, of West Sommerville, Mass.

She has a crew of 39, including several members of her own sex.

The steamer, purchased at Hamburg, was brought to Odessa by Comrade Shetinina, and will carry a cargo of freight to Kamchatka.

Text of Vandenberg Address on Tax Program

The text of a radio talk made last night by Senator Vandenberg (Republican), Michigan, on the subject of the Administration tax program:

My Fellow Countrymen:

The United States suddenly confronts a new Federal tax problem. It has been unexpectedly precipitated upon our people from a volatile White House. It involves considerations vital to all because no tax was ever yet devised which did not ultimately involve mass citizenship. Let us put first things first, and face the facts.

Fact Number One—Although the President's annual address to the Congress last January asserted no new taxes would be necessary in 1936, and although his congressional spokesmen were saying this same comforting thing as recently as three weeks ago, he suddenly switched his thinking on June 19 and demanded new and punitive levies on a few high incomes, a few high inheritances and on large corporations.

Fact Number Two—The President evidently originally intended his vague homily to be an ultimate rather than an immediate mandate. Apparently he had no thought of present action. Indeed, he specifically said the questions were "too complicated and difficult" to be adequately answered prior to this session's adjournment. For the moment he was wholly right in this latter aspect. Evidently he figured he was simply launching an adroit political flank movement to surround and confound his own restless and vocal left wingers. But the left wingers promptly and gleefully put him on the spot. They demanded immediate action as proof of faith. They were in no mood for pale promises which might never mature.

Fact Number Three—The President was caught on the horns of his own dilemma. He immediately dumped his own original purpose and deserted his own party spokesmen. He, too, demanded immediate action. By not being too specific, he left open certain lines of retreat. But his insistent mandate was imperious and immediate. It was one of those summary moments for which the New Deal is famous. Dictators often are that way.

Revolt Rules.

Fact Number Four—His loyal party servants—dazed but dogged—faithfully responded—with vigor and vertigo—and at once set themselves to the mad task of rewriting the basic tax laws of the Republic in 72 hours. Thereupon a miracle occurred. They faced severe revolt. It was more than a punch-drunk Congress and a pump-primed country could stand. It was the last straw. It seems that there are limits to American patience. The explosion rattled the White House rafters and produced a salutary pause which communicated itself to Capitol Hill.

Fact Number Five—The President hastily shifted back again—or that was the way it seemed to most innocent bystanders. Blandly, but not too successfully, he blamed the news-hawks for misrepresenting him. His House and Senate leaders—as agile as the man on the flying trapeze—just as hastily reverted to their own original sanities. They were groggy, but glad. The process of somewhat orderly and relatively deliberative legislation was resumed. A new tax bill will not be written with some semblance of rational consideration for the realities, and with at least a limited permit to affected citizens—who are about to be separated from their money—to speak their piece.

Thus it is that new tax laws are now in process of more orderly development, although there is yet no evidence of the pious purpose asserted in the original presidential message as follows: "If a government is to be prudent, its taxes must produce ample revenues without discouraging enterprise." I applaud the sentiment, but I deplore its total absence in the program up to date. This leads to another set of facts.

Fact Number One—The Federal Treasury is racing merrily toward potential insolvency. During the past 12 months it has paid out $13,812 every passing minute of the day and night. In two years we have spent more than $14,000,000,000, while we have taken in less than $7,000,000,000. This takes no account of other billions we have guaranteed. This spending spree still continues at break-neck speed. We charge the bills to posterity. We pillage our grandchildren. We still spend $2 for every dollar we take in. It is only a question of time when such a crazy process ends like the career of any other wastrel.

Underwood & Underwood.

SENATOR VANDENBERG.

Fact Number Tow—In the face of such arithmetic, there are but two possible results. Either we go to deliberate monetary inflation to cheat our debts and debtors—and, simultaneously, we ruin ourselves as all other people, similarly tainted, have ruined themselves; or we balance our budget, pay as we go, and restabilize the public credit by heavily increased taxation. I digress to say that no amount of taxes could be as burdensome and as confiscatory as uncontrolled monetary inflation which would cruelly crucify us all. This is not a matter of argument. It is an historic axiom. There are a few natural laws which no regime, no matter how infatuated with its own benevolence and power, can repeal or evade.

Fact Number Three—We can not escape the need for new taxes. This need is already here. Paying out has been a happy holiday. Paying back in is something else. To the extent he asserts the need for revenue, the President is right. But his own proposals thus far are inadequate, incomplete and pathetically superficial. They strain at a gnat and swallow the camel. It is politics rather than economics. To this extent the President is ominously wrong.

Thus we now collide with another set of very hard and very cold facts which we shall ignore at our peril.

Fact Number One—The Administration's new tax program, as thus far disclosed, will raise far less than $400,000,000 annually. Even at this promised maximum—which few realists remotely concede—this is only about 10 per cent of one year's deficit at the present rate of spending. It curries popular favor by pretending to "soak the rich." It may thus produce votes. But it will not produce revenue. The total income of all the multimillionaires thus marked for slaughter would not pay the President's bills for 30 days. Furthermore, such a program can not possibly satisfy our real "wealth redistributors" whom the President apparently hopes to placate. It is not a tax program. It is not even a good soap-box formula.

Fact Number Two—The formula contains no suggestion of convalescent economy. It does not even flirt with a balanced budget. There is no longer even the familiar promise—often made, always broken—that we are in sight of a purpose to start to begin living within our means. There continues to be total amnesia in respect to the President's own solemn warning of two years ago: "Most liberal governments are wrecked on the rocks of loose fiscal policy." Indeed, this rapidly is becoming an Administration's epitaph instead of its aspiration. The present tax formula proposes simply to pour more public money down a bottomless well. It would pretend to refill a barrel with the spiggot and the bung-hole open.

Country "Jittery."

No wonder the country gets jittery in such a presence—a country which would literally leap into a recovery stride if its government would give it a convalescent chance. No wonder there are prayers for more lucid intervals.

It is time to set our house in order, and to quit these hectic detours from the straight road. A passion for reform should not ignore the simple truth that we must have recovery first in order to have anything worth reforming.

What does this mean in respect to the taxes which we discuss this evening? The answer is in another and final set of facts.

Fact No. 1. Rational economy again must pursue a balanced budget as speedily as possible. It is far more important not to spend needlessly than it is to tax for extravagances, experiments and wastes. At best the burden will be heavy for some time to come. The more the reason to husband our resources lest we exhaust the only reliance upon which the victims of this depression can depend.

Fact No. 2. With rational economy in practice, and fewer brain-storms to salvage, a new tax program should raise enough money to do the job. Of course "the rich" must pay—and pay up to the hilt. But let us not delude ourselves. The income tax base must be broadened and all the brackets must accept a heavier load. There is no other way to get the money. Inevitably millions of our citizens must contribute, each according to his ability to pay. Nor will they unduly complain if they may be assured that they are buying national solvency. Otherwise they will have a right to complain—and bitterly. Incidentally, when this broad tax program arrives — and citizens realize there is no Santa Claus—the popularity of loose spending will suffer a wholesale set-back.

Fact No. 3. The tax program must be practical or it is worse than useless. It is simple folly to try to cheat the law of diminishing returns. Instead of "distributing wealth" we may destroy it. I am frank to say I believe in using inheritance taxes to achieve social objectives. But there is a point beyond which the break-up of a large fortune may ruin the industry which sustains it and thus, in turn, ruin thousands of its related employes. I should not relish, for example, the spectacle of a great motor industry which the Government takes over for inheritance taxes and delivers, let us say, to Dr. Tugwell or Jim Farley or Harry Hopkins to operate. There are some calamities which the country could not survive.

Fact number four. Corporation taxes are business taxes. Recuperated private business is our hope for the future. It must carry its full share of the tax load; but it must not be driven to discouragement or despair. It must not be nominated for punitive slaughter. At the moment, it may be better to emphasize taxation upon the individual, after the earnings of business have been distributed to him.

Fact number five. Any such program must include the elimination of tax exempt bonds. Otherwise, these "rich" instead of being "soaked"—(to use the favorite language of the demagogue)—will continue to slip through the back door to enjoy relative immunity. Thus they may laugh at their would-be executioners. Yet the Administration formula does not appear thus far to include this little item, although the President spoke bravely of it in his first pronouncement. Without it, any program is a snare and a transparent delusion.

This in conclusion. It were better for Congress to recess for a few months while a real program is developed to fit our whole necessity. None of these new taxes will be collected until next year anyway. There is no gain in haste. There may be tragic loss. It were better that seasoned judgments should reach a sustained and healthy conclusion. There are some things too desperately important to all America to be settled on the vagrant basis of an off-hand hunch. Pellmell statesmanship is always hazardous—never more so than now. In any event, it is past time for prodigal Uncle Sam to return to the fiscal sanity of his fathers.

Scientist Will Test Simultaneous Origin of Man in Various Lands

By the Associated Press.

Seattle, July 7.—Dr. Lawrence T. K. Griswold "dragon catcher" of the East Indies, headed today for South America hoping to prove that the origin of mankind was relatively spontaneous and in different parts of the world.

Dr. Grisworld believes the "Garden of Eden" theory may be wrong.

The New York archeologist said he has shot apes in South America of a type that would indicate man was flourishing there before the shrubbery in the Garden of Eden had been touched.

"I am going to South America in an effort to demonstrate the plausibility of the theory that mankind might have originated in the Brazilian and Peruvian country as well as in Asia, and could easily have migrated north to what is now the United States," Dr. Griswold said.

The theory involved is that mankind sprang up spontaneously, perhaps simultaneously, from the apes, in several different regions, particularly South America, Africa, Asia and Canada.

"This is in contra-distinction to frequently accepted thories that man originated in Asia and stepped across the Diomede Islands to Alaska in order to reach the United States," he said.

Dr. Griswold gained the "dragon catcher" name when he captured 43 giant lizards of the species veranus komodensis. That is the name for dragons from Komodo Island. They are probably descendants of Tyrannosaurus, one of the most terrible animals that ever ate an ape-man, he said.

In South America the scientist hopes to catch anthropoid apes alive. He will also explore the ruins of Tishuanacu near the Andes Mountains.

Duce's African Plans Assailed By Missionary

Is Move to Crush Weak and Less Fortunate, Edwards Avers.

Mussolini's promised attack on Abyssinia is a move to "oppress and crush the weak and less fortunate," Dr. John R. Edwards, corresponding secretary of the Board of Foreign Missions of the Methodist Episcopal Church, declared in a sermon yesterday before the congregation of Dumbarton M. E. Church.

Recalling a recent visit to Italy, the visiting pastor observed the Italian dictator had improved "the cleanliness and orderliness" of the country.

"At the same time I saw soldiers on their way to Africa to be there before the tropical storms, so that they would be acclimated for war in Abyssinia at the close of the rainy season," he said.

Need of Christian Ideals.

"Italy sees the ancient glory of Rome, and through the influence of Mussolini is attempting to restore that greatness. For this purpose a great system of physical training, of abstinence from intoxicants, tobacco and stimulants exists among the Italian youth.

"There is no effort along these lines for the sake of moral or religious perfection, but only for the greatness of Rome. The physical strength thus attained is to be used to oppress and crush the weak and less fortunate in order to build up a great Italian state."

Dr. Edwards said the only hope for world peace is through the institution of Christian ideals. This can be achieved, he pointed out, through world missions. "The solution of merely social and human questions without the power of Christ will not accomplish world peace.

Hopeful Signs Seen.

Although strained relations between France and Germany, and between Russia and Japan indicate a growth in nationalism, there are several hopeful signs. China, under the leadership of Gen Chiang Kai-Shek, is advancing the cause of peace, according to the Methodist secretary.

"The training for world citizenship goes on. The great program of the world is peace and equality of opportunity for all. Other aims such as militarism or nationalism produce only chaos. The real aim of the church will be accomplished only "when the government is upon His shoulders."

Endeavor Society Forms Peace Unit

Fellowship to Protest War Is Organized.

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, July 7.—Thousands of Christian Endeavor members, anxious to erect another bulwark against war, organized the world peace fellowship as a new department of their organization before the thirty-fifth annual convention adjourned today.

They gave their indorsement to "all constructive measures looking toward the establishment of peace among nations and the final abolition of war."

Harry N. Holmes, president of the New York State Union, moved for the establishment of the peace fellowship and it was quickly created. Thousands of delegates signed up for membership immediately and Ernest Bryan, of New York, was named head.

The convention indorsed the Kellogg-Briand pact and the "progressive disarmament proposals" made by the American delegation to the Geneva disarmament conference, and suggested studies of the other agencies seeking world peace such as the World Court, League of Nations, and the International Labor Office.

The Federal Diary

Registered in U. S. Patent Office.

By Morgan Baker.

NEUTRALITY in public service constitutes, generally, the most conspicuous difference between the British and American systems. This admirable and patriotic policy was covered yesterday in this column. Today the British public service as a career is the topic.

BAKER.

The army and navy have been career services in Great Britain since the country emerged from the Stone Age. Gradually the career system spread throughout the public service.

The Indian service, records show, was put on a definite career basis by the reorganization in 1853, following the Macauley report. The foreign service and the higher branches of the civil service were placed on a career footing, although somewhat precariously, two years later. The civil service generally became a career service in 1870 with the Order in Council establishing open competitive examination as the normal method of entry.

Since 1870 the lower ranks have been as definitely career opportunities as the higher, although the possibilities of advancement are limited, despite ameliorations introduced in 1920. Young persons completing their secondary education deliberately choose the national service as their life work, becoming clerical class or executive class officers.

Even younger persons, obliged to drop out of school before completing their secondary education, look specially to the civil service examinations for writing assistants or clerical class officers as opening the door to a career.

For university men, the civil service, the church, the army and the navy furnish four vocations which are held in high esteem. The influence of nepotism in British business is so great that the public services are often referred to as the chief "open" careers in Great Britain.

The career aspects of the civil service are found to be suggested by the following characteristics:

1. Entrance at an early age.
2. Salary schedules allowing annual advancements for over 20 years in a given major category of employment.
3. Permanent service.
4. Opportunity for promotion to higher classes.
5. Transferability from headquarters to field and vice versa, and from one field station to another.
6. Formal training privileges in many departments.
7. The redundancy rule, which holds men in some form of employment when their customary employment is terminated, in lieu of furlough or discharge.
8. The rule of political neutrality.
9. Retiring pensions, and generous sick-leave allowances.

In what ways, the American Government employe might ask, have the British sought to ameliorate the supposed deadening effects of permanent employment in a non-competitive service?

One device is the requirement of an annual certification of satisfactory service before the annual increment is forthcoming. Of a similar nature is an "efficiency bar," a point in the incremental scale which can be passed by a special certificate. Careful selection on the basis of efficiency and merit with scant regard for seniority in the higher grades, another device for keeping the less ambitious in the lower grades.

Special recruitment for the more responsible positions in the administrative class gives some guaranty of exceptional fitness in this category. In some departments, of which customs and excise is the leading example, much has been done to stimulate the staff by recognizing their suggestions as to better methods. Over 500 suggestions were accepted within the first five years of the system. For the higher grades, the grant of honors is a form of recognition which stimulates endeavor.

Membership on the boards of directors of the many service associations and unions, and service on the Whitley Councils and their committees, is a further form of recognition which has played a part in the last 15 years.

Over and above all these specific devices, there is in the British service a marked degree of fundamental honesty and sense of loyalty which has developed an esprit de corps capable of sustaining collective effort on a high scale. The importance of such an esprit de corps naturally varies from department to department, but is not unknown in any. Tradition also plays its part, and can be employed effectively to recall past triumphs and to lead on to new victories.

Two Promotions Announced.

Designation of Edward L. Bennett as chief of Editing and Recruiting Section and Mrs. Amy A. Harradon (P), as assistant chief, is announced by Civil Service Commission. The appointments are incident to the retirement of Dr. Thomas A. Griffin, who was formerly in charge of the editing and recruiting activities.

Mr. Bennett was appointed in the Commission in 1917 and has served continuously there ever since. He has had many years of experience in the Commission's editing and recruiting work. In addition to his official duties, Mr. Bennett has contributed to numerous publications and has won numerous awards in connection with his literary activities.

Mrs. Harradon has been associated with the editing and recruiting work several years. Formerly she was chief of a correspondence section in the Commission.

Discovering America
With Maxine Davis

Maxine Davis, magazine and feature writer, has gone forth to discover the America of 1935. She will write of her experiences for The Post. Her fourth article appears today.

Columbus, S. C., July 7.—Gov. Olin Johnson has a method of handling strikes that other State executives might examine.

I saw it in vivid operation.

When the Governor come to his office this blistering summer morning, he learned of a strike at the Monarch Mills, just outside Union, some 70 miles away. He promptly sent a man from his own office to find out about it.

At noon his emissary arrived at the mill and called his chief. "What's the trouble?" the Governor was drawling. Then sharply, "What's that?"

Over the wire the staccato sound of shots. Two men killed. Gov. Johnson did not wait to hear of rights or wrongs. "Tell Mr. Nicholson to close down the mill, and tell 'em I'll be out by 3:30."

He sent no messages; issued no statements; never mentioned the militia. By 2 o'clock he had sped over the winding roads to the gates of the mill, to the 1,000 men milling about, ominously waiting.

Coatless, hatless in the burning sun, he ascended the steps of a schoolhouse across the street.

"Don't start any more disturbances," he pleaded. "Go home. Go home and keep quiet till we see what's to be done."

Somehow, a sense of calm descended as he spoke in his slow, unruffled voice. The Governor is a young man, only 38, but he has the stature of a statesman. There's understanding in his straight dark eyes—and no wonder. As every man there knew, he was one of them. Didn't he start to work in a cotton mill when he was 7, sweeping aisles, and stay there until he was 18?

"You have to give and take," he urged. "You have to give and take with your wife. I have to give and take with the Legislature. Now you form a committee to represent you. I'll ask Mr. Nicholson to have someone represent him, if you'll both permit me to name an impartial person to act with you. All of you who will go home and wait till we work this out peaceably hold up your hands." There was a sea of hands.

The upshot: The mill reopened a few days later, differences settled.

This isn't the first time the Governor has done this. It's getting to be a custom. He developed it before he was elected last winter. The people trust him, and so do the owners. His difficulties have arisen only in the case of mills owned by men or corporations outside the State—men who don't know him. These personal appearances may sound melodramatic; they're not. They are part of the technique of a man who believes he is charged with defending lives and jobs as well as property. A man who, in a word, is a whole-hearted supporter of the New Deal as he understands it.

An intelligent liberal, he represents, I think, the best of the new spirit in the South.

But he clings to tradition in this: He believes firmly in States' rights. He doesn't want a constitutional amendment to abrogate them. "I believe," he says, "that there is ample patriotism in the United States to carry forward a program by the States that will tend to minimize unemployment, pay living wages to labor under favorable working conditions and preserve the buying power of the masses of our citizenship."

In spite of his concept of State rights, South Carolina has obtained all its relief funds from Washington, and his Legislature has taken no measures to care for its unemployables when the Federal Government ceases direct relief there on July 1!

It Pays to Listen.

A bridge player's ears will be of untold value to him if he keeps them wide open and listens to all phases of the bidding. Below is an example of a beautiful play made possible because the declarer paid attention to the bidding and based his conclusions on the minimum strength the opponents had to hold to make the bids they made.

South, Dealer
Neither side vulnerable

	♠ A 6 5 ♡ 7 6 ◇ K J 9 7 5 3 ♣ A 10
♠ 7 ♡ K 9 4 2 ◇ 8 ♣ K Q 9 7 6 4	W E S	♠ K 3 ♡ A J 8 3 ◇ Q 10 4 ♣ J 8 5 2
	♠ Q J 10 8 4 2 ♡ Q 10 5 ◇ A 6 2 ♣ 3

South	West	North	East
Pass	Pass	1◇	1♡(1)
1♠(2)	2♣(3)	Pass	Pass
2♠(4)	4♡(5)	4♠(6)	Pass
Pass	Pass

1—This is a doubtful overcall in a four-card suit, but with distributed strength East feared to pass.
2—Having passed originally, South could almost have bid two spades with so strong a major suit.
3—West explores the possibilities of the club suit before raising the hearts.
4—Now South jumps to show the strength of his hand.
5—Back to the heart suit. West would have been safer if he had raised the hearts the first time and shown his clubs afterward.
6—It is obligatory for North at this point to show his spade support.

The Play.

South made his contract by drawing brilliant conclusions from the previous bidding and the fall of the cards on the first few tricks. West opened the deuce of hearts and East won the Ace, shifting to the deuce of clubs. The Queen fell to dummy's Ace. South now reasoned that if the spade finesse lost and he was forced also to lose a diamond trick, he would be down and to avoid this contingency he had better start preparing for a throw-in play later. He therefore led dummy's remaining heart. East played low and South perforce finessed the ten. West took the trick with the King and tried to cash the King of clubs, but South trumped.

South cashed the Queen of hearts, and instead of taking the rather obvious spade finesse, he led a low spade to the Ace. He was almost sure East held the spade King since without that card East could hardly have overcalled. The spade finesse would therefore have been futile.

After putting up dummy's spade Ace, South led back the five of spades and East was stuck in the lead with the King. At this point East had to concede the remainder, for if he led a heart or a club South would be able to discard his losing diamond and ruff with dummy's last trump, while if East led a diamond it would be into a tenace.

Had South taken the spade finesse he would have lost his contract, for East could have won the King and exited with a low spade and later South would have had to come to his Queen of diamonds, which would have been the setting trick.

By the Associated Press.

With Arch (Pine Tree) McDonald idle today, the next best thing in baseball is the all-star game between leading players of the American and National Leagues. As a matter of record, three-fourths of the local station time will be baseball. WOL alone contributes music to the citizenry between the hours of 1 and 4.

Columbia's announcers will be France Laux, of KNOX, St. Louis, and Jack Graney, contributed by WHK, Cleveland, in which city the annual game is played. N. B. C. uses Graham McNamee and Tom Manning. Turn to the sports pages for details of the fracas.

C. B. C. holds old home night for Guy Lombardo and the Royal Canadians, who begin a brand new show at 7 p. m., WJSV. It was almost seven years ago that the Lombardos first poured the strains of "Auld Lang Syne" into the ozone through Columbia's network. Carmen, of the numerous Lombardos, will sing "You're All I Need" and "Two Together." The band features "Girl With the Dreamy Eyes," "Murder in the Moonlight," "Chasing Shadows" and "When the Organ Played at Twilight."

Stephen Foster's memory will be honored in the Contented Hour, WRC, at 9, plus an orchestral finale of "Cat and the Fiddle" selections . . . Margaret Speaks includes Massenet's lovely "Meditation" and Franz Lehar's "Velia" in her hour with William Daly's symphonic orchestra, WMAL, 7:30 p. m.

A rather spirited debate this week between two inveterate listeners finally was won by a shade by an ardent supporter of Pick and Pat. His opponent, who championed Molasses and January, ultimately conceded a fine point or two. Heigh ho. As you may or may not know—Pick and Pat and Molasses and January are one and the same black face team.

Which is reminiscent of an incident when Amos and Andy first burst into public flame. For a long period Sam 'n' Henry had been wowing the people in Chicago and vicinity in broadcasts from WGN. After Amos and Andy had captured the public's attention, two listeners wrote briefs on the virtues of the two teams. One a new Amos and Andy fan, and the other doggedly upholding the virtues of the dearly departed Sam 'n' Henry, and sent them to the radio department of a Midwest paper. We've always wondered what happened when they read the radio column the next day—explaining that Amos and Andy were merely the reincarnation of Sam 'n' Henry.

Radio Poll of Public By Post Starts Today

"Curbstone Queries" is the name and the locale will be the sidewalk in front of The Washington Post Building. The time—noon.

Beginning today, newsmen of The Post will conduct an informal daily poll of public opinion on current topics—both serious and not so serious—for WMAL. Passersby from the lunch-hour crowds will be the interviewees.

Whatever the first "curbstone query" today may lack in polish and finish will be compensated for by the novelty of both interviewer and his subject being unfamiliar with a microphone.

The subject will not be announced until the querying begins.

"Curbstone Queries" will be a daily feature (except Sunday) of WMAL.

Society Likes Blue and White For Hot Weather Sport Garb

Taking their cue from sea-going garments, whose smartness is generally in direct ratio to the judicious combination of navy blue and white, designers, first, and the wearer, second, have adopted the same colors for many of their sports clothes.

Members of Washington society, who refuse to let such a thing as heat deter them from the round of activities that occupies the days, have chosen their sports clothes to give a maximum of coolness and an amazing smartness. Miss Fay White, photographed just as she left the court after playing a game with her father, Lieut. F. G. White, wore a tennis suit of white pique with a stripe of dark blue on the shorts.

Mrs. Nick Abbott and Miss Patty Parker, the daughter of Capt. Arthur Parker, had just finished a set with Mr. Abbott and Mr. Stanley Current, when the above picture was taken. Mrs. Abbott tucked her curls out of the way with a scarf which matched the multicolored linen suit she wore. Miss Parker chose a dark-blue jersey blouse, just as thin as it was dark, and laced it with white and wore it with white shorts.

The relaxation on a dim, cool porch is as much a part of tennis as the game itself. Miss Whitney Strayer, daughter of Col. Thorne Strayer, and Miss Dorothy Considine, daughter of Maj. J. E. Considine, collected Ensign H. B. Bowen, jr., and enjoyed the porch part of tennis. Navy blue and white-striped jersey formed the top for the white linen shorts Miss Strayer wore. Miss Considine selected the same colors for her costume, the top of lisle and the shorts of pique. Ensign Bowen's tennis clothes were, simply and briefly, a white polo shirt and khaki shorts.

Here's a Boon For Sufferers From Sunburn

Cream Now on Market Will Keep Complexion Soft and Smooth.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

BEWARE of old King Sol, the sun! He's a bogey-man who'll get you if you don't watch out. There's nothing he loves better than perching there on his sky-ey throne and lashing you with his burning rays. He dotes on watching your skin turn red. Simply gloats when the blisters pop out. Swells with glee at the dry, dull and scaly aftermath.

Poor to old King Sol, though! Why should he annoy you? There's a certain cream on the market now that has a way with him. You can depend on it to keep your complexion soft and smooth throughout the summer. The harder Sol glares down at you the madder he gets, for his viciousness is curbed by this cream.

Just try it and see. If you've basked on the beach all day and come home with a fine lobster coloring, rub on the cream and invite the nicest golden tan you ever saw.

If your face has that weather-beaten look, don't delay. Open up your jar of cream and start right in. Use it in the morning and at night for sure, and if you're a lady of leisure who takes an afternoon siesta, take it with a thin coating of cream over your face.

Naturally you wonder why this cream works such wonders. One good reason is because it contains oxygen. This perks up those old skin glands and makes them active and keeps the skin alive and clear.

When autumn comes you'll really feel like celebrating when you compare your fresh, vital complexion with others. You'll be glad you took just a little time each day for a little of this cream. Instead of having a skin that's tired, coarse and sluggish, yours will be young looking and in great shape for the trying winter ahead.

One jar of this cream costs so little it's well within reach of all budgets.

Attractive Bath Package.

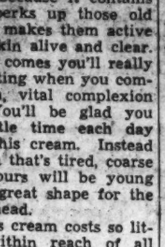
Few things are more fun to give or receive than one of those attractive bath packages consisting of a gigantic cake of soap, and a box of dusting powder.

The soap is literally about the size of an eggplant. It is compounded of pure vegetable oils and delicately scented with jasmin or June geranium. The dusting powder you'll find unusually smooth and soft—and ultra refreshing for after-bath use. It comes in a lily flowered box with a large downy puff.

This little set is already popular with hostesses who like to give "something different" for bridge parties.

Cowhide Travel Kits.

It's small wonder that visitors to our shores look upon the American man as a downtrodden, ill-used member of society and of the home when they see women catered to on all sides. To this forgotten percentage, a certain cosmetic concern pays its respect, by offering a new travel kit made of genuine black cowhide lined with cafe au lait colored fabrikoid. The appearance flatters the masculine ego, and the contents assure perfect masculine grooming. A regular size sprinkler flacon of after-shave lotion, a tube of lather shaving cream, and after shave powder in a non-breakable plastic container will make a man's face beam with smug satisfaction on a woman's world! These grooming essentials are held in place by leather straps and can be easily slipped in and out.



The kit snaps firmly shut by two buttons, and there is just one single distinctive decoration, an insignia stamped in gold on the cover flap.

This is vacation time for men as well as women—and the best time ever to invest, really a very small sum, in a shaving kit handy for packing, traveling—and using. Men also have birthdays and anniversaries and deserve such a kit as a gift from their wives or sweethearts.

Waterproof Pouch for Beach.

Fifteen cents will buy you a waterproof pouch to tuck away in your swimming bag. This will hold powder and puff and help you chase the shine from your nose.

Outside of the World.

ONCE FOR A moment I stood outside of the world;
It was firm under my feet, nothing whirled
About me, only a sense that here, on the grass,
I stood beside time, and the world, and watched them pass.

Knew that the seasons and turn of the long year
Was one with each other, as clear as the dawn is clear.
That spring was a windy day, summer a breath,
Autumn a flaming sky, and winter was death,
That changes and does not change . . . Above and below
There was nothing to see, or feel, nothing there,
Only the hedge and the road and the clear air,

Return.

SURELY THERE will come a day
On an English hill;
When the sea wind brings the rain.
When the thrush is still

Nebulous as wreathing mist,
Dreams shall come to birth,
Hoarded memories distill
From the ancient earth.

Time set like an ebbing tide
In receding flow,
Deep within me, I shall feel
What I can not know.

Standing with uplifted face
Wet with English rain,
I, who long had lost my way,
Shall be home again.

Flower Shade.

BENEATH A strangely silent tide of heat
The beach lies acquiescent. It is noon—
Long moments past, the swimmers, one by one,

The ocean and a certain tryst are mine!
Behind me and beyond, the fir trees stand
Knee-deep in pools of shade. But on the rock
There is no shade, nor on the scorching sand,

Save where thin lilac shadows, lightly thrown
By morning-glories and the wild sweet pea,
Make fragile flower-shade. For this I wait,
And share with none my secret ecstasy.

To hear the opening and closing of vast doors

Half-Forgotten Romances of American History

John Howard Payne—Mary Shelley.

Shortly after the poet Shelley was drowned in the Gulf of Spezzia, his widow, Mary Shelley, found a balm for her lonely heart in the friendship of John Howard Payne, actor, playwright and author of "Home, Sweet Home." The two met in Paris and corresponded for seven years.

By Elisabeth Ellicott Poe.

"AN exile from home splendor dazzles in vain," wrote John Howard Payne, American song writer whose immortal ballad, "Home, Sweet Home," will be cherished by mankind for uncounted centuries.

The man who wrote it was himself an exile from all that was dear to him and he died alone and absent from family and friends in Tunis, Algiers, where he had been appointed as consul by President Fillmore. Years afterward his body was brought back to America and to Washington, where all that is mortal of the author of "Home, Sweet Home," rests in Oak Hill Cemetery in this city. Thousands of pilgrims visit the spot yearly to pay tribute to him.

Few who visit the grave of Payne realize that he was a part in a half-forgotten romance, a romance of literary likeness and inclinations that blossomed quite late in his life.

Romance Ripens.

His romance was with Mary Shelley, second wife of the poet, Percy Bysshe Shelley, of England. Mrs. Shelley found in the adoration of the American bard after the death of her husband in Italy a balm for her saddened heart. Anyway, considerable correspondence passed between them when they parted, then the romance appears to have ended without any known rift between Mrs. Shelley and Payne. Perhaps Mrs. Shelley could not forget the passionate poet whom she had lost so tragically. John Howard Payne himself belonged to the unreal world of Thespia. Of a prominent New England family, he was distantly related to Dolly Payne Madison, wife of President James Madison. His love for the stage began with his school days in a private Boston institution. Then he became the editor of a little paper known as the Thespian Mirror, which attracted the attention of the editor of the New York Evening Post, and the lad—he was little more—was offered literary work in New York.

There was another lure there as well—the better theaters. So Payne left Boston. But his parents were eager for him to complete his college course before he entered either literature or drama in a serious way. He remained in college, however, only for a year. Then his mother died. College days were now over for John Howard Payne. He made his debut as young Norval in the play of "Douglas" in the old Park Theater, New York, on the evening of February 24, 1809.

Pursued Art Abroad.

His success was immediate. His company went on the road. In Boston he played Romeo to the Juliet of Mrs. David Poe, mother of Edgar Allan Poe. The future poet was then only a few months old and passed much of his time in his mother's dressing room waiting for her reappearance to attend to his own particular needs in the way of sustenance. Young Payne became enthralled with the charm and grace of Elizabeth Arnold Poe and did all he could to assist the struggling family financially out of his own more ample purse.

It was in 1813 that John Howard Payne, upon the advice of friends, went abroad to pursue his art. He thought to remain a year, actually he was in Europe nearly 20 years. In England his stardom as an actor was continued. He met stage and literary notables by the score and, after a time, he left the stage and wrote dramas. He was fairly successful in this field, but none of his plays live in history and his fame rests upon the slender support of a single poem—"Home, Sweet Home." This came to be, however, through his playwright activities. In writing a play, "Clari, the Maid of Milan," he needed several songs and his famous lyric thus came into being. It was fitted to a tune by Sir Henry Rowley Bishop, director of music in the Theater Royal, Covent Garden.

It is little known that in presenting a copy of his song to a cousin in London Payne added two stanzas to it. We are indebted for this information to the illuminating volume: "John Howard Payne," written by Rosa Pendleton Chiles of Washington, whose source material is very helpful to all interested in the life of John Howard Payne.

History has not recorded whether Shelley and John Howard Payne ever met in life. It is known, however, that Payne was a great admirer of the works of Shelley, and this must have added immediate interest to his meeting in Paris, probably in 1823, of Mary Shelley, second wife of the poet, shortly after her husband had been drowned in the Gulf of Spezzia.

Their acquaintance soon ripened into a friendship and from 1824 to 1831 they exchanged many letters and apparently saw each other frequently.

There is no doubt but that Payne's lonely heart was captivated by the brilliant woman. She was adept in letters as he was in drama and music, and there was much to bind them together in understanding.

Failed to Press Suit.

Writing of this phase of the romance Mrs. Chiles says: "If he grew to love her, it was, perchance, not so much from a depth of passion as from an affectionate appreciation for the satisfying niche she filled in his solitary life. To Mrs. Shelley, accustomed, as she had been, to the mad brilliance of a husband whose genius overtopped almost any other of his day, to the eccentric philosophy of a father who a few years earlier had stood out boldly among the major intellectuals of the time, and to intimate acquaintance with the man who, in very truth, did surpass all others of his own and many another day in dazzling endowment and productiveness—Byron—association with John Howard Payne was doubtless a trifle tame, yet she enjoyed him and formed a sincere friendship for him.

Some historians claim that it was Mary Shelley's growing interest in Washington Irving that finally put the quietus on Payne's romantic hopes in her direction. Be that as it may be, the romance faded out between the author of "Home, Sweet Home" and the poet's widow.

Failure to Press Suit Held Cause of Unhappy Culmination.

Perhaps Payne was too self-sacrificing in his affair with Mrs. Shelley. More persistence might have won her hand, for there is no doubt but that she entertained a very sincere affection for him. But Mrs. Shelley never really stepped outside the glamour cast around her life by Shelley. No other man could have claimed her whole-hearted attention again. As she herself once remarked to Payne: "Having tasted the waters of Nepenthe, what more can I hope for?" The waters of the Gulf of Spezzia, in washing out the life of her poet husband, also had ended for her any real chance of happiness without him. She lived to be 53, dying a year before Payne.

It is known that Payne fell in love once more, this time with a girl 20 years his junior, Mary Harden, of Georgia. There is a tradition that Mary Harden loved Payne, but her father, stern Gen. Edward Harden, made her reject the wanderer's suit. Anyway, she lived unmarried to the age of 80 years.

W. W. Corcoran and other Washington friends got Payne a reappointment as consul to Tunis in 1851. He was delighted to return to his old post, but ill health attacked him almost at once. He did not seem critically ill at first, but gradually grew worse until he died rather suddenly one day, far, indeed, from his "Home, Sweet Home," and perhaps with the echoes of that song the last earthly sound that he heard. For 30 years he was buried in the Cemetery of St. George in Tunis. Then, through the intervention of W. W. Corcoran, his remains were brought to America and reinterred in Oak Hill Cemetery in Washington on June 9, 1883, the ninety-second anniversary of his birth.

The poet of the homeless was at home once more.

Picnic Party Can Be Gay, And Is Easy For Hostess

Games, Porch Supper Will Please All, at Very Little Expense.

By Dorothea Duncan.

HERE IS a picture of summer suburban hospitality. A game of croquet on the lawn, a picnic supper served on the porch just when appetites are at peak and a round or two of your favorite game to finish out a gay evening. If you doubt its possibilities, try it for yourself. It will work like a charm on your most sophisticated guest.

It is the kind of party that the woman on a limited budget will welcome. The menu is simple and can be served without the aid of a servant. The food all goes on the table at the same time. The cost isn't prohibitive either. Three and a half dollars is the approximate expense for the food at a party of ten.

Everything can be purchased in advance and all the preparation, with the exception of that of the salad and gingerbread, can be done hours ahead of time.

Let's start in the morning by preparing the sandwich loaf. Take an unsliced loaf of day-old bread, remove the crusts from the sides, bottom and top. Cut the loaf lengthwise into four even slices. Spread each slice with softened butter; it will take about a quarter of a pound. Spread the bottom layer with sweet pickle relish and top it with a second slice. Spread the second slice with a mixture of chopped cold boiled ham mixed to a spreading consistency with mayonnaise dressing. Six or eight slices of ham will do it. Top it off with a third slice of bread; spread this with soft pimento cream cheese (one three-ounce package) which has been mashed to a spreading consistency with a little top milk. Cover with the last slice of bread. Now lay the loaf on a small breadboard. Spread the outside as you would frost a cake with three packages (three ounces each) of cream cheese which has been mashed to a spreading consistency with a little top milk. Place it in the refrigerator, breadboard and all, until ready to serve. Bring the loaf to the table on the wooden board, and, to serve, cut in slices with a sharp knife.

Now for the punch. Squeeze the juice of twelve lemons and six oranges and strain. Pour the strained juice into a two-quart jar into which you have already dropped one-half pound of lump sugar. Add to this one pint of grapejuice and ice cubes from two trays, about 24 in all. Screw on the top to the jar and set in the refrigerator. Before serving, give the punch a good shake, or stir. It is still a little bit strong, but pouring over ice cubes to serve will make it just the right strength.

Clean the salad ingredients before mixing and keep them in a damp towel or the vegetable hydrator to crisp. Just before serving mix the salad like this: Chop one large firm head of lettuce and one-half head of solid cabbage, mix together and place in a wooden salad bowl. Add one bunch of radishes which have been sliced very thin, one green pepper, cut in thin strips, and three red apples which have been diced but not peeled. Mix well together and blend with mayonnaise which has been thinned with cider vinegar.

The gingerbread, if you use one of the several excellent mixes already prepared, can be mixed up at the last minute and popped into the oven, to emerge fragrant and hot when the guests sit down to the table. Let the cherries, polished, but with stems on, resplendent in a wooden bowl, be the center table decoration.

If you have any wooden plates, forks or spoons this is the time to use them; otherwise, paper table accessories will be in perfectly good taste. Coffee cups of china or pottery will be the only breakable dishes that you will need and these are suggested because it is always more comfortable to handle a hot beverage in a firm, non-heat conducting cup.

For culinary assistance, call Dorothea Duncan, National 4200, or write to her, inclosing a stamped, addressed envelope, in care of The Washington Post.

What Today Means

"CANCER"

IF July 8 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 8:45 to 10:45 a. m., from 1:45 to 3:45 p. m. and from 6:45 to 8:45 p. m. The danger periods are from 10:45 a. m. to 12:45 p. m., from 3:45 to 5:45 p. m. and from 8:45 to 10:45 p. m.

Should an argument arise this day, it may be good judgment to try to avoid it through a compromise. Being too insistent will probably cause unpopularity, so avoid being so.

If a woman and July 8 is your birthday, you are probably very liberal in your views. You will display both good judgment and tact not to flagrantly disregard in social matters some of the accepted conventional rules. You possess sufficient strength of character to be able to correct any shortcomings with very little effort. It will pay you not to ignore your faults simply because it requires a little exertion on your part to rectify them. It is best not to do things in a spectacular manner. Do your planning deliberately to get the best results. You should find brokeraging insurance, real estate, or conservative securities congenial work. You are likely also to shine as a saleslady.

If a man and July 8 is your natal day, you must guard against wishing to always have your own way, if you expect to be popular, as well as successful. Literary, or educational work, politics, and some specialized branch of salesmanship, are among the mediums through which your best opportunities are likely to come.

Is 23-Year-Old Girl Justified in Retaining Friends Whom Her Mother Dislikes? How Decide Who and What Are "Trash?"

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: About six weeks ago my beau (a man I have known for years and whom my family has always admired) introduced me to a young couple just our own ages (26 and 23, respectively). The man is a relative of his and he had not seen them for a number of years. The four of us immediately became good friends and have gone out together about once a week since then and sometimes more frequently. My mother seriously objects to my friendship with this couple.

* * * *

It is true they have no "social rating," are less educated than we, and that their financial means are less than ours, but we have found them interesting companions and have had delightful times together. Consequently, I see no reason why our friendship should not continue.

* * * *

I have told my mother if she will give me one legitimate reason why I should not go with them I will break off the friendship, even if it means losing the friendship of my beau. But she only says: "They are trash. I don't like them." She has forbidden me to bring them into our home and whenever I mention going out with them she is furious.

* * * *

The four of us are now planning to go on an all-day motor trip together some Sunday soon, leaving about 6 o'clock in the morning. When I told my mother of the plan, she negatively "raised the roof." I have retiterated my request for a legitimate reason why she does not like them, but she gies me none.

* * * *

I might say this is not the first time she has objected to some particular friend of mine, although if she likes them they are welcome at any time and she is always willing to help me arrange parties, etc. I have always been a close companion of my mother and love her dearly, and am writing to ask if you think I am being stubborn in continuing to carry out my plans and this friendship over her objections? I have been working ever since I graduated from high school and have usually been considered level-headed and business-like by my friends. Eagerly awaiting your opinion, I am, sincerely yours,

JANE.

DEAR JANE: Inasmuch as this is not the first time your mother has objected to certain of your friendships, it seems to me you (as one who has earned the reputation of being "level-headed") should be able to determine better than another whether her objections in this instance are a matter of prejudice or of sound judgment.

* * * *

You say your mother, when requested to give a legitimate reason for her objection to this couple, has said only, "They are trash." If her accusation is to be taken literally, in Webster's definition of the word, it means she believes them to be "worthless or disreputable" (in the sense of being dishonorable) persons. If you are morally certain such an accusation is without foundation in fact—and one assumes that, since your mother refuses to permit them in her home or know them at close range, you know them better than she does—I suppose you are justified in ignoring her verdict.

* * * *

You ask if you are "being stubborn in continuing to carry out . . . this friendship over her objections." Well, Webster defines "stubborn" as being "resolute in purpose or mental attitude," so perhaps that adjective may be aptly applied to your conduct in this instance.

If your judgment is to be trusted, your obstinance in this instance is justified. If it isn't, and only you can give the honest answer to that question, then of course you are being "stubborn" in the sense of being "unreasonably unyielding."

Hot, Dry Skin Warning Sign Of Sunstroke

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

WITH the coming of the next heat wave we will read of numerous cases of sunstroke. In general parlance this term includes heat stroke and heat prostration. There is a difference, however, that we must recognize. Heat stroke calls for prompt action if life is to be saved. In this emergency the heat regulating center of the brain is out of balance and the patient's temperature may be as high as 110 degrees F. Literally, the victim is on fire as one can live but a few hours with such a temperature.

The beginning symptoms are sometimes observed for a few hours before actual collapse occurs. There may be headache, dizziness, nausea, vomiting, diarrhea, marked restlessness, and an excessive thirst. The patient does not perspire and the skin is hot and dry. In other cases unconsciousness may come suddenly.

Treatment consists in reducing the temperature as rapidly as possible. The patient should be placed in a tub of water to which ice has been added and the body vigorously rubbed until the temperature falls to approximately 102 degrees F. The patient should then be moved to a bed in a room where the air is circulating freely. As a rule, the temperature will continue to fall. If it doesn't, ice bags may be applied to the head and sponging with alcohol and ice water continued. Sometimes the heart will need stimulation.

Exhaustion or prostration due to heat presents symptoms which are quite different. The patient is not unconscious but may complain of dizziness, nausea, weakness, and inability to see clearly. Abdominal cramps are not infrequent. Usually the temperature is not over 103 degrees F. There is no emergency, but the patient should be placed in bed in a cool atmosphere as soon as possible.

To get rid of heat it is necessary not only that the person perspire, but that the perspiration evaporates promptly.

'Revive God,' Pastor Tells Economists

Vesper Service Held at Virginia U. Institute.

Constitution, New Deal Are Scheduled for Discussion.

By the Associated Press.

University, Va., July 7.—A call for God to be taken out of the past and brought into the world of today was issued by Dr. William Adams Brown of the Union Theological Seminary in New York, who spoke to nearly 1,000 tonight in the vesper service that marked a pause between the first week of the Institute of public affairs and the second.

Discussion will begin tomorrow morning of a different set of problems from those that have been under consideration during the week just ended. They will be issues that more nearly concern the domestic life of the American people than were the international issues considered last week.

The Constitution and the New Deal, taxation for prosperity, the significance of American membership in the international labor office. Contemporary education issues, cooperation and conflict across the Pacific, American-German relations, and the place of religion in character education are the topics of the discussion groups that will begin tomorrow and meet each day during the week.

Loss of Faith Explained.

Tonight Dr. Brown, in his vesper sermon, said that the reason why so many men and women of today are losing faith in God is that "we who say we believe in God have been satisfied to live on our inheritance from the past instead of fixing our eyes upon God's activities in the present.

"When we speak of God our words fail to carry conviction, not because what we say is untrue, but because it is out of date. We have talked of God, we have thought of God, we have felt about God in ways that were natural and appropriate in the world of our fathers.

Nicholas Roosevelt, former Minister to Hungary and now an editorial writer on the New York Herald-Tribune; David J. Lewis, Democratic Representative from Maryland, and Gilbert H. Montague, former chairman of the New York Bar Association committee on the NRA, are to lead off the discussion of the Constitution and the New Deal tomorrow morning.

Taxes to Be Debated.

President Roosevelt's new tax proposals are to be discussed in the afternoon in the round table on "Taxation for Prosperity," after addresses on paying for economic security have been made by Dr. Joseph P. Harris, assistant director of the President's committee on social security, and Noel Sargent, secretary of the National Associations of Manufacturers.

Miss Pearl Buck, the novelist and Pulitzer prize winner, and Commander Archer M. R. Allen are to speak on backgrounds in the Far East; a summary of the International Labor Conference is to be made by Dr. James T. Shotwell, of Columbia University; Dr. John B. Andrews, of the American Association for Labor Legislation, and Spencer Miller, jr., director of the Workers Education Bureau of America.

Miss Buck and Dr. Shotwell are to be speakers at the evening public meeting. Others who will deliver public addresses during the week are Dr. Neil Carothers, of Lehigh University, noted economist and author, Tuesday night; Senator Alben D. Barkley, of Kentucky, on Thursday night, and on Friday there will be a discussion of New Deal policies by Gen. Hugh S. Johnson and Representative James W. Wadsworth, of New York, which will be broadcast over a coast-to-coast radio hookup.

Drys in W. Va. Driving for Ban In County Votes

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Charleston, W. Va., July 7.—West Virginia, or a large portion of it, may go dry again by the local option route within the next year. This is indicated by the large number of counties which already have ordered, or are preparing to order elections to determine whether State-owned liquor stores may be operated within their borders.

Under the act which created the State Liquor Control Commission and authorized it to open stores wherever it saw fit, local option elections may be held in communities or counties upon petition of 25 per cent of the qualified voters, and, when such communities or counties go dry, the commission must move out, bag and baggage.

St. Albans, a town of 5,000 population, 12 miles west of Charleston, will hold an election Tuesday over the "wet" and "dry" question. It is expected to go dry, and this result will be taken by the dry forces to induce other communities to follow suit.

Campaign Spirited.

Local option elections already are scheduled in Upshur and Ritchie counties August 6; Roane County, August 7; Jackson County, September 3, and in Lincoln County, September 17. Similar elections are planned for Grant, Doddridge, Gilmer and Nicholas counties later in the fall.

A spirited campaign between wet and dry forces has opened in Roane County, where dry leaders are bringing out all of the old arguments against the evils of liquor, while the wets are charging that the bootleggers are the moving spirit behind the scheme, and they say, to create dry areas will simply serve to open up fertile markets for those who sell contraband goods.

The assistant prosecutor of Roane County during the week reported to the State liquor control commission his opinion that the local option clause in the liquor control act is unconstitutional because it is contradictory to the title of the liquor bill which states merely that it is an act to "control the sale of liquors."

Kump Reverses View.

Counsel for the commission announced, however, that the commission would not attempt to investigate the constitutionality of the act, and would not interefere in any way with counties or communities seeking to drive out its stores. This view was taken in spite of the warning that most of the State soon may go dry, and thus leave the liquor commission with a $500,000 debt, which it would be unable to curtail, because the few remaining liquor stores would not provide it with enough cash to pay its overhead.

Potato Strike Nets $250,000 Say Growers

Estimate Gain Will Be 2 Million by End of the Season.

Farmers Maintain Iron Grip on Eastern Shore Shipping.

By the Associated Press.

Painter, Va., July 7.—Spokesmen for the Eastern Shore of Virginia potato growers' "strike" committee estimated today that the organized market boycott has already meant an additional $250,000 to the potato producers of the area.

The producers organization has demanded, and received, a minimum price of $2 a barrel for all potatoes stipped out of the area The organization has effectively "bottled up" the area to prevent shipments at cut prices.

By the end of the season, it was estimated, the program will mean an increase in the producers' income of $2,000,000.

The committee, operating on a day-to-day basis as conditions arise, voted another loading holiday tomorrow avoid glutting the market.

With dealers and truckers cooperating, there were no signs of friction in the campaign for better prices. The producers are keeping a firm grip on the situation, however, continuing to picket the Maryland line and watching all loading points closely.

Truckers hauling potatoes out of the area now must carry a manifest from some selling organization showing that the potatoes have been sold F. O. B. here and that carrying charges equal the railroad carload rate to the same destination. This regulation was established by the committee so that truckers cannot deliver potatoes to foreign markets cheaper than railroads and cause price differentials in the terminal markets.

Another mass meeting of producers has been called for Tuesday night.

The committee reported a nationwide interest in their campaign, inquiries having been received from all sections of the country.

By the Associated Press.

Princess Anne, Md., July 7.—The law has saved a Somerset County raccoon from a trip to New York.

Gov. Harry Nice recently received and had publicized a request from former Gov. Al Smith of New York, for native Maryland animals for the New York Zoo.

Several Somerset County hunters, feeling that no collection of Maryland animals would be complete without a coon, hunted one down and made all arrangements for shipping it to New York. Then, in neighboring Queen Annes County a Centerville resident was fined $25 and costs for possessing two raccoons out of season.

The Somerset hunters, zoo or no zoo, turned their raccoon loose. They promised, however, to catch another if promised immunity from the State game laws.

Maryland Lists Stricter Rules Governing Milk

State Health Chief Gives Outline of Changes on Pasteurizing.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, July 7.—New regulations governing the control of milk shipped, handled and consumed in Maryland were outlined today by Dr. R. H. Riley, director of the State department of health.

The new regulations were adopted by the State board of health recently. They make more specific requirements regarding the pasteurization of milk and define the standards for milk sold by grades.

Pasteurization apparatus must be approved by the State department of health and shall have the proper temperature control. The milk shall be heated to a temperature of not less than 143½ degrees Fahrenheit continuously for not less than 30 minutes and shall be cooled properly.

Grades A, B and C raw milk and pasteurized milk are practically the same as those of the United States Public Health Service standards. Grading is not compulsory, but milk offered for sale, as graded, must conform to the State requirements.

Incorporated cities or town and counties are authorized to adopt and enforce milk regulations not inconsistent with those of the State board and to provide for the grading of milk.

The new regulations do not apply to cities of more than 100,000 population which have an organized department of health and which maintain milk supervision under State law or city ordinance.

Asylum Attendant Drowns in Severn

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Annapolis, Md., July 7.—James G. Northrup, 36, attendant at the Crownsville State Asylum for Negroes in Anne Arundel County, was drowned last night while bathing in the Severn River.

Seeking relief from the heat, Northrup and a party of other hospital employes went into the water at what is known as Sand Caves Beach just before dusk. Northrup failed to come up after a dive. His companions recovered the body within 15 minutes and the rescue squad of West Annapolis Fire Company worked for an hour with a pulmotor in a vain effort to revive him. Northrup is survived by the widow and a son, 12. He was appointed attendant only 10 days ago.

Quenstedt's Appointment Rests on Vote

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Baltimore, Md., July 7.—Whether Mayor Walter E. Quenstedt of Annapolis will become warden of the Maryland House of Correction depends upon the showing of the Republicans in tomorrow's election in the State capital, a party leader indicated today. It is known that statements made by Quenstedt after Charles J. Butler, chairman of the welfare board, refused to oust Dr. J. L. Wright in his favor did not rest well with Republican administration leaders, who felt that Quenstedt should not have injected himself publicly into the controversy between the Governor and Chairman Butler.

But if Republican forces of Quenstedt are victorious tomorrow, a different situation is expected, and the Annapolis Mayor may secure the appointment by October. It was reported that his appointment at that time undoubtedly would have the approval of the board of welfare.

It has been known that a tentative understanding has been reached between the Governor and his welfare board chairman. After several conferences it was indicated that any breach that might have resulted from the Quenstedt controversy has been healed.

Annapolis Voters Go to Polls Today

By the Associated Press.

Annapolis, Md., July 7.—Annapolis voters go to the polls tomorrow with Democrats hoping to break the six-year-long hold Republicans have held on the post of mayor.

In addition to the mayor, a city counselor and eight aldermen also are to be elected. A total of 4,783 voters are eligible and a heavy vote is forecast in view of the heated campaign waged by both parties.

Walter E. Quenstedt, Republican mayor for the past six years, is not a candidate to succeed himself, and the Republican nominee is T. Roland Brown. The Democratic candidate for mayor is Louis N. Phipps.

The full slate of candidates is:

Jamestown Services Celebrate Earliest Holy Communion Rites

Rt. Rev. A. C. Thompson Officiates to Mark 1,607 Service.

By the Associated Press.

Williamsburg, Va., July 7.—Services commemorating the first-known celebration of Holy Communion in the first permanent English settlement in America were held at Jamestown today. The original service was on the third Sunday after Trinity, 1607.

Services were held at the Robert Hunt Memorial Shrine on the island, erected by the Colonial Dames of America in honor of the first rector of the original colonists, the Rev. Robert Hunt. Speaking at the shrine, the Rev. G. MacLaren Brydon, of Richmond, said that the history of Virginia is associated with the history of the church.

"The services on this historic spot were the beginnings of a great religious movement along with the governmental and cultural life of Virginia," Dr. Brydon said, adding that the Anglo-Saxon race is what its religion has made it. No people, he said, go higher than the ideals and standards set by their religion.

He pointed out that the growth of the church was side by side with that of the colony, saying that when a county government was established a parish was established with it.

Following the address by Dr. Brydon the service of Holy Communion was celebrated by the Right Rev. A. C. Thomson, Bishop of the Diocese of Southern Virginia. The old Jamestown communion silver of 1661 and the new memorial silver were both used in the service.

'Death Curve' On U.S. No. 40 To Be Ended

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Baltimore, Md., July 7.—With the tentative approval of the United States Bureau of Roads for the rebuilding of the Federal Highway No. 40 between Frederick and Clear Spring, Washington County, having been given the program of the State roads commission, survey corps will begin work tomorrow on a new route across South Mountain.

The proposed rebuilding of the route between Frederick and Clear Spring will cost between $1,500,000 and $2,000,000, half of which the State must meet.

Will End "Death Curve."

The State roads commission is prepared to appropriate the State's share and will rush surveys along the entire route, a distance of approximately 38 miles, so that it will be ready to proceed immediately following final approval by the United States Bureau of Roads, an official of the commission said.

The new route over South Mountain, beginning about a half-mile east of Boonsboro, would eliminate not only the sharp curves, but reduce the grade considerably by following a ravine through which flows a small mountain stream. This new route would be just below and to the north of the present route.

"Death curve," scene of numerous fatal accidents, 4 miles east of Hagerstown, also is to be eliminated, as will all sharp curves between Frederick and Clear Spring.

Governor to Inspect.

The program for Route 40 does not include the bypass through Hagerstown, an official of the roads commission said. This will have to be submitted as a separate project and some doubt was expressed as to an early approval for this bypass looking to the elimination of three grade crossings at a cost of approximately $400,000.

Gov. Harry W. Nice and members of the State roads commission will inspect the proposed road construction this week, visiting southern Maryland July 10 and western Maryland July 11 and 12. The tour has been referred to by the Governor as a "good will" visit.

Lynchburg Project Awaits PWA Action

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Lynchburg, Va., July 7.—Councilmanic consideration of a proposal to replace wooden pipe in the Pedlar River gravity water line here with cast iron pipe is being held up because the PWA has failed to promulgate a schedule of wages to be paid under loans secured from that Federal organization. This has prevented the water department from completing its estimates of the cost, although a survey was completed some weeks ago.

It is proposed that the city replace the 30-inch wood pipe with 36-inch iron. The line in Amherst County was replaced last year.

Printer's Hand Cut Off.

85,000 to See All-Star Game Today; Nationals 6 to 5 Choice

Chapman, Old Nat Foe, Fueds With Newsom

BEN CHAPMAN, Yankee outfielder who once started a near riot in Griffith Stadium, hurled insults yesterday at Buck Newsom, Washington pitcher, in a word battle that promised to develop into a major baseball feud.

The big Nat pitcher and the fiery New York player kept up a verbal duel throughout the game which the Yanks won, 11-1. Newsom explained the defeat by saying the game was only a "workout" inasmuch as it was his first appearance in six weeks. He has been out with a broken knee cap, suffered shortly after his purchase from St. Louis.

Every time Chapman came to the plate, he informed Newsom he was going to get a hit. Newson merely laughed insultingly.

After a few innings of this, Chapman took to standing in front of the Yankee dugout when the Nations were on the field and "riding" Newsom from this vantage point. Spectators could hear them all over the field.

Chapman Walks Twice.

Newsom didn't let Chapman get a hit but he did walk him twice. Newsom drove in the Nats' only run with a single to center. This added insult to injury for Chapman tried for a shoe-string catch of Buck's hit and failed.

What apparently angered Chapman was a published report attributed to Newsom that the "Yankees are not even a first-division ball club much less a first-place one."

Newsom, who aspires to the "daffiness" crown now held by "Dizzy" Dean, denied after the game any feud between him and Chapman. He insisted after the game that they were the best of friends, adding, "Ben's a fine ball player and I admire him for it but those Yankees are no first-place team."

"Tough From Now On."

"From now on," Buck said, "I am going to be one tough pitcher to lick. Today I was only getting in shape."

Two years ago Chapman engaged in a fist fight with Buddy Myer, Nat second baseman, the outcome of a disputed homer un. Chapman was ejected from the game and on the way to the showers was attacked by Earl Whitehill, Washington pitcher. A near riot followed when players of both teams entered the fray.

League Heads Ignore Fans, All-Star Game Hurt—Gallico

By Paul Gallico.

A Special Correspondent.

CLEVELAND, July 7.—The All-Star major league ball game is having its third performance here tomorrow afternoon, and a number of you who have made the trip here are expected to view it with what is technically known as mixed emotions. Frankly, I am not as interested in it or excited about it as I was in the days when the fans selected the players on the teams and the sports writers battled with the managers to pay attention to what the fans had said. This year the show seems to be just another major-league promotion, and, as such, I do not expect it to be as competent a job or as good a show as it was when a Chicago sports editor drew the idea for an all-star game out of his skull and then put it over in spite of opposition from both leagues.

Yes, it was a newspaperman by the name of Arch Ward who thought up the idea of having two real fans' ball teams and bringing them together. The game was an instantaneous success in Chicago. Its success was repeated last year at the Polo Grounds in New York, and this year 85,000, the largest crowd ever to see a ball game, are expected to jam the huge Municipal Stadium on the lake front here to see the third of the series.

I doubt very much whether Mr. Ward will be cut in on a share of the profits or offered a bonus for thinking up this excellent idea and then making it work, but I do not think he will care because the game is for a ball players' charity anyway. But, at least, I can see that young Mr. Ward, who is a Notre Damer, gets the credit.

Mr. Ward also promotes an all-star football game in the fall along the same idea and gets crowds of from 80,000 to 100,000 to gather to look at them. To date no one has taken this away from Mr. Ward as the major leagues took that all-star baseball game and made it their own. But then, maybe Mr. Ward didn't want the game any more because the major leagues somehow couldn't manage to keep their words that the players picked by the fans in the national voting would the players that would start. I know that in New York we didn't want it anymore, and my paper last year gathered the largest vote in the East only to find that it didn't mean a thing.

Twice in succession, the fans nominated their line-ups and the leagues declared that the managers could name whom they pleased without being bound to the national vote. Since the national vote involved an honest majority of highly interested baseball fans and newspaper readers, and the managers involved two individuals, the balance of power seemed a little disproportionate and the newspapers having been the Patsys twice in a row, which is par for our course, declined the third time.

When the leagues took it over, they named Frisch and Cochrane the managers of the National and

By Edward J. Neil.

"RABBIT" MARANVILLE has come to the end of the baseball trail. This is the memory-evoking story Gerry Moore writes from Boston: "The deadline for trades among the major league baseball clubs passed," Gerry writes, "without the revivified Braves making any personnel changes.

"However, this figurative milestone in the season marked one twinging fact.

"'Rabbit' Maranville, the diminutive idol of Boston fans for more than a decade, who will be 44 years old in November, will not be able to realize his hopes of beating Honus Wagner's record for playing in the most National league games.

"Manager Bill McKechnie of the Braves said 'I'd never forgive myself if "Rabbit" played and anything happened to him.'

"Those words virtually announce the termination of the active end of one of the most glorious and colorful careers in baseball's history.

The "Miracle" Fails.

"WHEN 'Rabbit' reported in uniform at the Braves' training camp in St. Petersburg this spring, it was marked down as a baseball miracle.

"The little veteran had broken his left leg in three places during a practice game at St. Pete the previous spring and those who thought he would never don a major uniform again were in the majority.

"But the 'Rab' was on hand this spring, full of his inimitable spark and fire. His main ambition was to take part this season in the 139 games necessary for him to play to break Wagner's all-time mark of 2,785. He realized that Tyrus Raymond Cobb's major league record of 3,033 was out of reach.

"However, 'Rabbit's' injury never healed properly. In addition, Les Mallon, whom the Braves obtained to fill Maranville's shoes last season, developed into the club's leading slugger. A rookie, Joe Coscarart, proved to be a brilliant utility man.

"As a result 'Rabbit' has played in only five of the 46 games the Tribe has played to date. The only complete contest was against the Giants a couple of weeks ago when, after the Braves had handed the G-Men their first shutout of the year, Coach Tom Clarke, of the Giants lauded the 'Rabbit' thusly:

"'That Maranville always was poison to us.'

"'Rabbit' played part of another game and pinch-hitted on three other occasions. The rest of the time he coached at first base, where he has often helped to keep up the morale of the Tribe when it tended to ebb."

What of the Future?

"EVEN if he played every game from here in, Peter Pan would be still 25 shy of Wagner's blue ribbon mark. Any thought of his playing in 1936 seems an utter impossibility.

"The question now arises: 'What does the future hold in store for this wonderful character?'

"Rumor is very strong that the 'Rabbit' soon will become a special representative of the National League in touring the country, assisting in forming and supervising the conduct of boys' clubs. There is no baseball player I know of better fitted for such a task than the 'Rabbit.'

Teuton Beats Paolino in 12 Rounds

Schmeling Is Impressive in Ring Triumph Before 50,000.

By the United Press.

BERLIN, July 7.—Max Schmeling, the grim-visaged black Uhlan of the Rhine, who formerly held the world heavyweight title, clinched a crack at Dead-Pan Joe Louis today by hammering out an impressive 12-round decision over the rugged Spanish veteran, Paulino Uzcudun, in Poststadion.

More than 50,000 fans, including former Crown Prince Frederick William and a large brigade of Nazi notables, saw Schmeling pound his way to his second victory in three bouts with the Basque woodchopper.

The German Dempsey's long-range field gun attack won nine of the 12 rounds, according to the United Press score sheet, while his game but ineffective 36-year-old opponent took 2. One was even.

Maxie's smashing straight rights knocked Paolino back on his heels again and again and partly closed both eyes before the uneven contest was finished. But the squat, gold-toothed Uzcudun kept coming in, with head protected by a "shell" defense of elbows and shoulders.

Dodges Rushes.

Paolino, weighing 202.4 pounds, landed only about a dozen wild roundhouse swings on the cool smart German boxer, who scaled 191.6. Maxie easily avoided most of Paulino's bull-like rushes.

This victory over the Basque, who provided a stepping stone toward the title in 1929, when Max gave him an unmerciful beating at Yankee Stadium, was not the most brilliant triumph of Schmeling's comeback campaign, but it probably was one of the most important because it clinched a "big gate" fight with Louis, the sensational Detroit Negro, at New York in September.

In Schmeling's second meeting with Paolino last May at Barcelona, Spain, Maxie was given a draw, although most of the newspapermen at the ringside thought he had won 8 of the 12 rounds.

Schmeling had little to gain in meeting Uzcudun today and had the Basque upset him or made him look unimpressive, it would have been a serious setback to the comeback campaign which was capped with a smashing victory over Steve Hamas March 10 at Hamburg.

Swings Cause Laughs.

Paolino was so wild at times that several blows dropped below the belt and the referee warned the Basque after one of these low punches caused Schmeling's face to twist in agony.

The bout opened with both boxers sparring cautiously. Maxie kept Paolino off balance in the first two rounds with sharp left jab to the face, meanwhile avoiding Uzcudun's smashing right and left hooks to the body. The German won the two sessions by a slight margin, but Paolino gained an even break in the third with a hooking barrage to the body and head that forced the former champion about the ring.

Schmeling won the fifth by a wide margin, shaking his opponent with terrific left and right jolts to the head, intermixed with several short smashes to the body—smashes that caused Paolino to crouch lower and lower as he tried to burrow into the German.

As the bout progressed Paolino's 36 years began to tell on him. He appeared weary and out of condition. However, two desperate hook-

Tigers Victors; Solters Hits 3 Homers

Browns Are Beaten, 12-5, as Detroit Wins Tenth Straight Game.

By the Associated Press.

DETROIT, July 7—Detroit conquered the St. Louis Browns, 12 to 5, today, giving the Tigers a slam in the St. Louis series and extending their consecutive victories to ten.

Julius Solters, however, drew more acclaim from the 15,000 cash customers than did the victors, for he connected for homers in each of his first three times at bat and drove in the five St. Louis runs.

Wildness of the St. Louis pitchers was a heavy contributing factor to Detroit's victory, for of the 11 bases on balls granted the Tigers 5 were turned into runs.

Detroit had three big innnigs, the first, second and third, in which 26 men batted. Ten hits were made and 11 scores were counted.

Mungo Out of All-Star Game; Walker Is Sub

Cleveland, July 7 (AP).—Bill Walker, veteran southpaw of the St. Louis Cardinals, was approved tonight by major league officials as a substitute for Van Lingle Mungo, Brooklyn right-hander, on the all-star pitching staff of the Nationals.

Mungo suffered an injury to a finger on his pitching hand several days ago and reported he would be unable to play in tomorrow's game here. His withdrawal leaves the Dodgers without a representative on the squad.

Yanks Shell Newsom To Humble Nats, 11-1

By Shirley Povich.

BUCK NEWSOM came back to Griffith Stadium with his broken kneecap yesterday and escaped with his life. A fusillade of Yankee base hits that threatened to dismember him buried the Nats under an 11-to-1 defeat.

Newsom pitched the full nine innings only by grace of the tolerance of Manager Bucky Harris, but he often found it expedient to pitch and duck almost in the same motion.

Against Newsom, the Yankees stirred memories of the power-house Yankees of old. Into the proceedings they tossed a home run by Lou Gehrig with the bases full and a second home run by Tony Lazzeri. But there were only two on base when Lazzeri contacted one of Newsom's pitches.

Nine of those 11 Yankee runs were superfluous, though, what with young Johnny Broaca frustrating the Nats with great regularity. In six of the nine innings he turned 'em back hitless, and at the finish was the possessor of a six-hit game.

First impressions may not be lasting, but in the case of young Dee Miles, the Chattanooga outfielder who made his debut with the Nats yesterday, they doubtless will endure until he reforms. The 2-run lead that the Yanks took in the first inning was an outright gift by Miles.

With two on base as a result of walks, and two out, Miles charged in on Tony Lazzeri's wind-blown pop fly to short right field, quit cold on the ball, then resumed his rush, and made an ineffectual dive for it as both runners scored.

The Nats almost got one of those runs back in the first inning, but Joe Kuhel overestimated his speed on his triple to center field and was out by 6 feet at the plate when he tried to convert it into a homer.

Indians Divide With Chisox; End Streak

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, July 7.—Ted Lyons shut out Cleveland 2 to 0, for the White Sox' seventh straight victory and the Indians' eighth straight defeat today, but the Indians came back in the second game of the double-header before 30,000 and broke both streaks with a 7-to-6 victory.

Sixteen passes marred the second game, which saw Thornton Lee, who had fanned eight, blow a 4-to-1 lead in the seventh by issuing four walks, which the Sox helped convert into four runs and a temporary 5-to-4 lead with singles by Luke Appling and Tony Piet. Cleveland, however, came back with three runs off Ray Phelps, third Chicago pitcher, and John Whitehead in the eighth for their first victory since last Sunday.

Score Tied at 5-All.

Tigers Week's Leaders With 8 in Row

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, July 7.—The World Series rivals of last fall, the Detroit Tigers and St. Louis Cardinals, dominated the major league action during the last week as the clubs rounded the season's traditional turning point—July 4. But in contrast to their 1934 meeting, the Tigers copped the honors this time.

Mickey Cochrane's inspired club, driving through to its tenth straight victory, climbing from third place a week ago into second and reducing the Yankees' American League lead to a single game, practically gave the other clubs a lesson in how winning baseball should be played.

The Tigers won eight of their string in the week which ended with today's games, outslugged every other major league club by a wide margin and at the same time compiled a fair defensive record. In the eight games Detroit slammed out 103 hits to score 74 runs, while allowing its opponents only 32 tallies.

Cards Also Unbeaten.

The Cardinals also went through the week without defeat and moved up from third to second place in their close race with Chicago and Pittsburgh, but they took an entirely different route. Instead of slugging, the Cards came through on the strength of their pitching staff, which allowed only 14 runs by the opposition, while St. Louis was scoring 36 times.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, July 7.—The grand old man of professional golf's "old guard," Walter Hagen, was designated today as playing captain of the American Ryder Cup team, which will play a British side at Ridgewood, N. J., on September 28 and 29.

Chosen along with nine other home-bred salaried shotmakers, the 43-year-old Detroit veteran's selection was by no means an "honorary gesture" on the part of the Professional Golfers Association, but justified recognition of the old campaigner's pulse-quickening finish in the open championship at Oakmont last month. The "Old Haig" has been a member of every team since the biennial series was inaugurated with an informal match in 1926.

Hagen's teammates were named in the following order: Paul Runyan, of White Plains, N. Y., 1934 professional champion; Sam Parks, jr., of Pittsburgh, and Olin Dutra, of Monterey, Calif, present and 1934 champions; Ky Laffoon, of Chicago; Johnny Revolta, of Milwaukee; Henry Picard, of Hershey, Pa.; Horton Smith, of Chicago; Gene Sarazen, of Brookfield Center, Conn., and Craig Wood, of Deal, N. J.

Chosen On Merit.

All members were chosen on the merits of their competitive records for the past two years, although Runyan and Parks qualified automatically on the strength of their laurels.

For Parks it is another milestone in his meteoric career. Less than six weeks ago just another pro struggling for a living, he skyrocketed to fame by beating the pick of the country's talent in the open championship. Purely on his record otherwise, Parks would not have come in for consideration for a place on the team.

Dutra gained his berth somewhat by the aid of his Garrison-finish victory in the 1934 National Open at Merion plus his triumph in the Miami-Biltmore tournament last winter. Ky Laffoon, the 27-year-old Arkansas-born professional, has played 161 rounds of medal competition in an average of 72.3 strokes per round, topping all the active tournament players in the country. Laffoon's one victory during last winter's barnstorming tour was in the Arizona Open, but he figured in the money in most others.

Schumacher, Harder Due To Start

Time of Tilt 1:30 P. M.; $103,000 in Receipts Is Expected.

By Alan Gould.

Associated Press Sports Editor.

CLEVELAND, July 7.—As the overture for a record-smashing baseball spectacle tomorrow in Cleveland's hugh lake-front stadium, Mel Harder, of the home-town Indians, and "Prince Hal" Schumacher, of the New York Giants, will wage the starting duel of pitchers in the third annual Major League All-Star game. Selection of these rival right-hand aces was assured by latest pre-game developments tonight.

Preparations were completed tonight to handle an overflow crowd of upwards of 85,000 spectators, following sanction from Baseball Commissioner K. M. Landis to sell standing room in deep center field.

Landis gave his approval after being told by Billy Evans, general manager of the Cleveland Club, that all but a few hundred of the 66,649 reserved seats had been sold, with indications pointing to the greatest turnout of fans in the history of the sport.

Time of Game Is 1:30.

Standing room for upwards of 5,000 on the field will be sold tomorrow, along with space for about 3,500 more standees in the double-decked stands, as soon as the 10,000 bleacher seats are gone. The gates will be opened at 10 a. m. (Eastern standard time). The game is slated for 1:30 p. m.

Evans, in predicting a capacity gathering, declared the paid attendance and gate receipts would set a new all-time high for a single game. The advance sale reached $92,000 today and a full house will mean $103,000. The proceeds, after deduction of approximately $15,000 for expenses, go entirely to the welfare funds for old ball players, including $10,000 to each league's benefit fund and the balance to the national organization doing similar relief work.

Fans from every State in the Union, including a host of notables, will witness the show. Officials estimated tonight that more than 50,000 spectators, a clear majority, will be from out of town, making up the most representative gathering ever to witness a baseball game. Canadian delegations will be on hand from as far away as Victoria and Vancouver, British Columbia.

Hubbell Is Eliminated.

Jerome (Dizzy) Dean is certain to shoulder a share of the pitching, despite the friction that has existed for some time between him and Manager Frankie Frisch. Paul Derringer, right-hander of the Cincinnati Reds, probably will share the mopping up with Hubbell, if and when necessary. Bill Walker, veteran Cardinal southpaw, also is available.

Vernon (Lefty) Gomez, ace southpaw of the New York Yankees, who won the first All-Star game at Chicago and pitched the first three innings last year, led the Americans into town. "El Goofy" declared his willingness to do anything asked. Lefty Grove, Cochrane's old battery mate with the Athletics, and Tommy Bridges, Detroit star, also will be available. Schoolboy Rowe, who JOE STANKUS, whom Tony Burruto, Blue Flame manager, has loudly acclaimed as his "ace in the hole," turned up in the eighth inning with the bases loaded in yesterday's titular Post Association battle with a game-winning double which gave the Blue Flames a 9-to-7 victory over Murphy's 5 & 10 Store in the deciding game for the first-half pennant in the National City A League. A crowd of 3,200 fans witnessed the contest.

Stankus' twin-base hit was the crowning blow of a stirring struggle which saw the Blue Flamers come from behind for the second time and snatch th game from the grasp of the Murphymen. Bob Lyons paved his own downfall in the fateful eighth by granting walks to Wiltshire and McGuire after John "Lefty" Stevens had opened the inning with a single. This same Stevens had put the Valets back into the game in the fifth inning with a lusty home run smack with two mates on the bases, which nullified the Storemen's early lead off Frankie DiNenna. Stankus went to the relief of the wavering DiNenna in the third and finished the game.

Pig 'N' Whistle got away to a flying start by trouncing Rinaldi Coalmen, 18 to 2, and miller Furniture scored over Cherner Motor, 13 to 7, in the opening second-half A league games.

Georgetown A. C. forged to the front in Section B by subduing Plaza Wine & Liquor Store, 10 to 2. Warwicks humbled District Grocery Store, 13 to 5, while the Woodmen of the World Elm Camp and Stansbury A. C. battled to a 1-to-1 draw in a five-inning fray, terminated by rain. Booker and Bethel were fightin git out in this pitchers' duel.

YOUNG JACK KENNEDY put the brakes on the fast-traveling Nation Wide Grocers yesterday when he pitched Simpson's Pharmacy to a decisive 10-3 triumph in the National City Junior League. It was a rude jolt to the hitherto unbeaten Grocers and made possible a four-way tie for first place as Auth's knocked off the Petworth Nationals, 13 to 3, and Washington Flour won in passive manner by a forfeit from Montgomery A. C.

The Hilltop Merchants also failed to present a team for their game with Wizard Lock. This being their second offense, both defaulting teams lost their franchisees and were automatically dropped from further competition in the league.

Fones, Gibson, Jenkins and Coakley shared honor with Kennedy in Simpson's upset of Nation Wide. Kidwell clouted a homer for the Grocers. Heft, on the mound for Auth's set down the Petworth Nats with four hits, and was never pressed after some solid hitting by his teammates, Lewis and Snow, had staked him to a five-run lead in the opening round.

Nolan Motors clipped the wings of the Petworth Eagles by a surprising 8-4 victory, but the latter team has forwarded a protest of the game to Vic Gauzza, league prexy. Takoma Playground routed O'Donnell's Sea Grill, 15 to 2, and Washington Boys Club scored over the Trojans in the other midget contests.

Cabin John, 11; Silver Spring, 9.

ON the crest of a six-run uprising in a slam-bang second inning, Cabin John coasted to the first-half Post Association pennant over the Silver Spring Giants yesterday in the Maryland County League. The eventual score was 11 to 9, but it almost appeared a foregone conclusion that Cabin John would bring home the title after that scoring spree in the second inning.

First Baseman Bauer, John Wire and Bryon were the chief contributors to a volley of alien base hits which greeted Pitcher Howard, of the Giants, in his second turn on the mound. Cabin John's attack subsided temporarily in the third inning, but broke out again in the fourth when the visitors boosted their total to 9 runs.

Meantime, Cranston Howard was working along nicely and was in no tight spots until the sixth and seventh frames during which Brooke Grubb's team was doing a little run-scoring on its own account—five scores to be exact.

Pitches Out of Hole.

Cabin John's Howard, having eased up somewhat after an hour of pitching in a hot sun, seemed to be in for the same fate that befell Silver Spring's Howard in that hectic second inning, but Cranston pulled himself together and had enough in reserve to extricate himself from a critical situation in the final inning. Silver Spring had pushed three more runs across and needed only two more to overtake the visitors' huge early lead.

Second-half play will be initiated Sunday with four games.

Best Prelim. Fighter Gets $10 From Ahearn

An old Goldie Ahearn custom of awarding the best preliminary fighter on the card a nice, new $10 bill will be revived at Griffith Stadium Monday night when the program of punch will be headed by a 10-round engagement between Harry Dublinsky and Bob Wilson.

The rotund matchmaker for the Joe Turner interests inaugurated the system of awarding the preliminary battler showing to best advantage $10 last winter, but somewhere in the shuffle the plan dropped. Ahearn announced last night that it would be revived "just to give the preliminary kids more incentive for fighting."

Jack Donovan Spurns Bortnick as Referee

"If Benny Bortnick referees our match, I refuse to work, begorrah!"

So said Irish Jack Donovan last night in connection with his scheduled feature rassling bout with Joe Savoldi at the ball park Thursday night. The Irish flipster still remembers, no doubt, the allegedly foul decision he received from Bortnick two weeks ago.

Setting something of a precedent in such matters, Promoter Joe Turner Donovan and promises to get either Gunboat Smith or Bernie Paul to take the job.

A HARD-FIGHTING Millwood team that refused to be beaten literally squeezed itself into the reigning position of the White Section Post Association race in the Northern Virginia League by nosing out Vienna, 3 to 2, yesterday on a neat bunt by Pitcher Duvall in the final inning. Duvall's bunt which saved Hummer was the climax to Millwood's counter rally to overcome Vienna's tally for two runs in its last time at bat.

A slugging Marshall team blasted the titular hopes of Fairfax Station in a 17-to-11 fracas which saw the Fairfax hurlers battered all over the lot. Millwood's win, coupled with Fairfax Station's loss, gives the former a fine chance to cop first-half honors Sunday.

Purcellville Victor.

Purcellville topped the slugging of the day, however, with a 21-to-5 massacre of Pitchers Jackson, Carter and Britt in the game with Aldie at Purcellville.

The runner-up position to the undefeated Ballston champions in the Red Section was taken by Middleburg by virtue of its 10-to-2 victory over Herndon. Arlington defeated Manassas, 3 to 2, behind some fine pitching by Jack Wesley. The Ballston-Falls Church game was cancelled by mutual agreement.

Details for second-half play in the Virginia League will be ironed out at a meeting of the managers at 8 p. m. tomorrow at The Post.

72-Hole Test Confronts Players

Rippy, Malloy, Burrows and Burton Looming as Choices.

CLAUDE RIPPY, George Malloy, Bradley Burrows and Bobby Burton loom as favorites to win places in the National Public Links sectional qualifying trials which will be run off today at Rock Creek and tomorrow at East Potomac.

The toughest grind in golf—72 holes of medal play—will occupy the attention of 74 of the District's best municipal swingers, but the above-mentioned four appear to be the standouts.

Each has qualified previously for the national championship. Rippy, ranking pay-as-you-go player in the District last year, competed in the 1934 tournament at Pittsburgh. Malloy won the District municipal championship a few years ago, and started off the year auspiciously by winning the East Potomac spring tournament last May.

Is Steady Player.

Burrows, winner of the 1931 Manor invitation, is one of the steadiest players in the District, while Burton long has been a dangerous medal player. Burton was runner-up to Malloy in the East Potomac tournament.

Ed Burns and Talbot J. Gibraski, professional golfer, will handle the situation at Rock Creek today. Thirty-six holes are on the bill today, with Harold Bowers, Bill Wilhelm and Jerry O'Connor leaving the tee first at 8 o'clock. In order to expedite play, the local public links committee last night made plans to have the golfers tee off in threesomes.

Two eleventh hour entrants were Jack Keele and Lawrence Byers. Keeler is a former Silver Spring High champion, and has starred in numerous junior tournaments.

Four Place Open.

Only four places are open. The low scorer also will win the District municipal title which John Connelly has left undefended.

The Rock Creek course, a rolling, deceptive layout that places a premium on accuracy in approaches, is in tip-top shape. U. S. G. A. rules will prevail. Distance will be the penalty for out-of-bounds and stroke and distance for lost balls.

The National Municipal Championship will be played July 29-August 3, inclusive, at Indianapolis.

Leaders in League Bow to Woodstock

Mt. Jackson Loses, 4-1, in Shenandoah Loop.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Woodstock, Va., July 7.—Woodstock downed the Mount Jackson nine in the first of a four-game series today, 4 to 1. Jake Sheetz, on the mound for the Shamrocks, granted but two hits over the nine innings and fanned 11 batters, while the team played errorless baseball behind him.

Bronner, Mount Jackson, fanned nine Woodstock batters and granted nine hits. Woodstock's first tallies came in the third inning. With Dellinger and Sine on first and second, Laughlin pounded out a double, marking the only one of the game. Mount Jackson received their lone score in the last inning. Shannon, who had been walked by Sheetz, scored on a sharp single by B. Myers, after Laughlin overthrew second and allowed him to reach third.

At no time after the third inning did the league leaders push the Shamrocks.

Score by innings:

Woodstock	002 100 010—4
Mount Jackson	000 000 001—1

Batteries—Woodstock, J. Sheetz, Laughlin; Mount Jackson, Bronner, Foley.

Strasburg beat Edinburg, 3 to 0, in the other game in the Shenandoah County loop. Mount Jackson still remains at the head of the league with Strasburg second, Woodstock third and Edinburg in the cellar position.

Two Tied in Belgium; Henry Cotton Fourth

Brussels, July 7 (AP).—Henry Cotton, of England, defending champion, finished fourth in the Belgian Open golf championship today as W. J. Branch Henbury, of England, and F. Vandonck, of Belgium, tied for the title with 72-hole medal scores of 283.

A. H. Padgham, of England, was third with 285; the Franchman, Boyer, had 287, and Sid Brews, of South Africa, wound up with 288. Alfred Perry, who recently won the British Open championship, was well down the list with 296.

4,000 See Women Golfers at Chicago

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, July 7.—Playing before 4,000 spectators, the biggest gallery of her American tour to date, Joyce Wethered, England's great woman golfer, teamed with Horton Smith today to defeat Mildred (Babe) Didrikson and Gene Sarazen in an exhibition match at the Oak Park Country Club.

Miss Wethered and Smith won under California foursome rules, 12 and 4, but the margin was reduced to 1 up on a best ball basis.

The English girl aimed at Virginia Van Wie's woman's course record of 76, but fell short by two strokes, going around in 39—39—78. Smith and Sarazen had 71s, 1 under par, while the Texas Babe, not at her best, needed 45—43—88.

Cox Is Delayed In Coming to Kenwood

New Pro Arrives Next Week; Jamison to Be Assistant.

WILFRED (WIFFY) COX, the well-known Brooklyn golf professional, won't be on the job at Kenwood Golf and Country Club until next Monday, Kenwood officials said last night.

Cox was to have reported today to assume the professional reins, but he has some business to clear up in his home town, and had to defer his local debut a week.

It also became known that Al Jamison, who has been acting pro ever since Al Houghton stepped out in favor of a manager's job at Indian Spring Country Club, will be retained as assistant to Cox. Jamison not only is a good playing pro, but a clubmaker as well.

At least ten Washington professionals and their amateur partners will invade the Rodgers Forge course, near Baltimore, today to play in the Middle Atlantic P. G. A. tournament. Al Treder, of Manor, has secured Russ Hollebaugh, of Kenwood, as his partner, and Bob Barnett and Dick Lunn will represent Chevy Chase. Cliff Spencer and J. M. Palmer will be the Beaver Dam standard bearers. The favorites are George Diffenbaugh and Roger Peacock, of Indian Spring.

Brewers Trounce Annapolis Nine, 6-5

Aided by Loose Fielding; Are Outhit, 10-7.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Annapolis, Md., July 7.—Loose fielding was largely responsible for the defeat of the Annapolis baseball team at the hands of Heurich Brewers of Washington here today, 6 to 5. It was the second time this season that the Brewers turned back the local team.

Annapolis outhit the Washingtonians, 10 to 7. Three homers were among its ten blows, two by Oscar Johnson and the other by Charlie Townsend. The Brewers went into a commanding lead by getting four runs in the third frame, resulting from two walks, two errors and two hits.

Perfect Score Wins Eastern Rifle Shoot

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Waynesboro, Pa., July 7.—Scoring 225 points out of a possible 225, or a perfect record, Carl T. Dunn, of Chicago, defeated Thurman Randle, of Dallas, Tex., to win the Palma individual match at 150-175-200 yards in the Eastern Small-Bore Rifle Association matches yesterday at Camp Ritchie, near here.

Carl F. Rider, of New Kensington, Pa., was well on his way toward setting a new record in the Swiss match when darkness stopped him. He shot 128 consecutive bull's-eyes when night came. Hal Drake, of Atlanta, Ga., was second in the meet.

Barnett's Shot Wins Match At Manor

With Dick Lunn, Pro Nips Greene and Treder in Informal Play.

By Dave Herman.

BOB BARNETT, the red-thatched Chevy Chase pro, and Dick Lunn, former District champion, defeated Al Treder, pro, and Hickman Greene, of Manor, 1 up in a stirring 18-hole match at Manor. With the match even, Barnett put over the killing blow on the eighteenth hole with a par 4. The other secured 5s. Treder missed a 6-footer. A 72 by Barnett was low. Treder had 73, and the amateurs approximately 76 each. They were even at the turn.

Melvin Kraft, up-and-coming young golfer who recently won the spring club handicap championship, added to his laurels yesterday by taking down first prize in the match play against par tournament at Woodmont Country Club.

Kraft finished 1 down to par, after shooting a creditable 37—39—76, the lowest score of the day. A 7 on the third hole, where he dropped 3 strokes to par, prevented him from playing the outgoing nine in sub-par figures.

Ralph Gibson and L. H. Whitten bit off a bigger hunk than they could chew, and lost to C. A. Metzler and Byron Beall, 2 and 1 in the finals of the Manor two-man team championship. Gibson and Whitten had to spot their rivals six strokes. Beall, ordinarily a 90 shooter, cut loose with the greatest score of his career—a 76. This was too much for Gibson and Whitten.

Johnny Miller, former Beaver Dam champion, won the medal with an even par 36 in the qualifying round of the nine-hole miniature championship at his club. W. Bion Moore and John Money tied for second with 37's each. Eighteen flights of eight players, each, will compete in three rounds of match play next Sunday.

Mathew Rettew scored his first ace at Beaver Dam, holding out a five iron on the 156-yard fourteenth while playing with Paul Fogarty and Paul Carey.

Mrs. George Diffenbaugh, wife of the professional, won the "most points" tournament at Indian Spring Country Club. She registered the most threes, fours and fives, scoring 21 points. Mrs. L. T. Powers, 19 points was second and Mrs. J. Franklin Gross, 18 points, third.

In class B Mrs. R. E. Kelly, with 29 (result of most 5s, 6s and 7s), was first, and Mrs. W. B. Vogel and Mrs. W. A. Romer, with 22, each, tied for second.

F. P. Kelly, 3 up on par, won the match play against par tournament for men at Indian Spring. Chester Leakin, T. M. Whitman, George Gist, 2 up on par, tied for second; J. C. Taylor, L. T. Harrison, and E. A. Markle, 1 up, tied for third.

Look out, youse Washington Golf and Country Club swingers—James C. (Jimmy) Corcoran is on the warpath! Corcoran turned on the heat yesterday for the benefit of his partner, Thurston Furr, and his opponents, Dorey C. Gruver and Dr. Tom Webb, hammering out a brilliant 69, 1 under par. Despite such torrid scoring, Corcoran and Furr won only by 1 up.

Corcoran reeled off seven 3s, four on the first nine, which he covered in 33. He bagged birdies on the third, fourth and fifth and picked up another on the fifteenth. The Corcoran-Furr combination had a best ball of 66, and the best ball of the foursome was 61. Webb fired a 77 and Gruver and Furr, 78, each. There were 12 birdies among the four.

Corcoran's card:

That "Punchbowl" sixteenth, 291 yards, yielded two eagles at Kenwood. Henderson Dunn holed out a niblick from 30 yards for a two, after his ball hit the flag on the bounce and dropped in, T. Mrs. Max Taylor, 103—21—82; Mrs. T. W. Perkins, 105—23—82, and Mrs. C. H. Offutt, 114—32—82, tied for the Mechaw Cup in the tournament at Beaver Dam. Ellen Kincaid, 15-year-old defending champion, also tied with 91—9—82, but elected to take the low gross prize.

Mrs. C. E. Purdy, 97—13—84, was fourth and Mrs. N. J. Waldron, 102—18—84, fifth.

Winners on the outside "ladies" nine were Mrs. R. J. Guch, Mrs. Joe Geibel, Mrs. William Henderson, Mrs. William O'Brien and Mrs. C. W. Claggett.

T. T. Hayden, with 88—18—70; C. A. Royce, 89—19—70 and R. J. Bartoo, 95—25—70, were the winners in the blind bogey tournament conducted by Senor Toney Sylvester at Bannockburn.

U. S. Looks to Possible Clash Of Two Helens at Forest Hills

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, July 7.—Indications today were that Helen Wills Moody, again the world's tennis queen, would make her first appearance before a home audience since her comeback in the Wightman Cup competition at Forest Hills August 16-17.

She was tentatively named a member of the American Wightman Cup squad several weeks ago, and it was believed her stirring victory over Helen Jacobs at Wimbledon yesterday would result in her determination to play in that competition. There was a possibility, however, she would compete in the Seabright, N. J., tournament July 22.

With Mrs. Moody, Miss Jacobs, Sarah Palfrey and Carolin Babcock as nucleus for the squad, America would be highly favored to add another victory to its long string of Wightman Cup conquests.

What American tennis enthusiasts looked forward to, however, was the American championships at Forest Hills, August 29 to September 6, where Miss Jacobs and Mrs. Moody might again face each other across the net. Forest Hills probably would fall far short of accommodating the throng that would storm its gates should Miss Jacobs be faced with the problem of turning back Mrs. Moody to hold the title the latter defaulted to her two years ago.

Meanwhile, in England the Californian stars went into the country to rest after their three-set match in which Mrs. Moody barely pulled out a victory, 6—3, 3—6, 7—5. They were exhausted after their match and left orders at Wimbledon that their addresses were not to be given out.

Charlottesville Turns Back Culpeper

Special Dispatch to The Post.

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va., July 7.—Culpeper, Valley League leader, lost to the Charlottesville team today, 12 to 7.

Despite the intense heat, the biggest crowd of the season witnessed the contest and saw the home team collect a total of 15 hits off four visiting twirlers.

Charlottesville started with a rush, pushing over five runs in the opening frame and scoring in every inning except one. Allebaugh and Fary were the big guns with the stick for the local team. The former hit two timely doubles and the latter contributed a triple.

Edelin Pounded Hard.

Edelin, on the mound for Charlottesville, also was pounded hard but kept the hits well scattered except in the second and fifth frames. Metheny, Douglas, Lowery and Lacy, of Culpeper, each got two hits, while Brown hit for the circuit.

By M. W. Meier.

WE are dead on our feet.

For many hours we have been plunging up the "hills and valleys" of old Chesapeake Bay to the tune of a stiff so'easter. We've trolled and still-fished from upper Southwest Middles to Barren Island and north nigh to Annapolis and all we have to show for the day are a few exceptionally big and exceptionally small hardhead. Maybe 15 fish, all told.

With us were Senator W. J. Bulow, of South Dakota, and his son; Representatives Fred H. Hildebrandt, of South Dakota, and Marion Zioncheck, of Seattle, and J. S. Bartow, of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

Everyone of importance seemed to be on the Chesapeake. It would have been possible to have called a minority meeting of either the Senate or the House. One could have called it all right, but the only subject available for discussion would have been "where are the fish and how can we get some."

Bay Weather Bad.

A stiff wind played havoc with fishing hopes over the week-end. There were squalls and showers and the waves ran pretty high. Despite a good boat, we were drenched from head to foot and the day was an "opening and a shutting."

Only a few catches were made despite many scores of parties. On Saturday night the situation was even worse, with the fish absolutely refusing to partake of either crab, shrimp or worms.

One Washington party alone seemed to have made good. They were Mr. and Mrs. De Ment, Roy J. Shough, James Holiday, Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Gossard and the Misses Mary Kenney and Lucille Cardewell. Among them they caught 150 croakers — a record, considering conditions.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

West Point, Va., July 7.—Gurkin (Beef) Treakle, 275-pound Craddock hurler, pitched his club to a 1-to-0 victory over the Chesapeake Club here today. It was Chesapeake's eighth setback of the season against 41 wins. Cheseapeake had also won 24 straight before they lost today's tilt.

The visitors scored their lone marker in the third when Mitchell's single got by Tody Hastings in left field, the runner going all the way to third on the play. With Archie at the bat, they pulled a squeeze play, Archie bunting safe as Mitchell scored. From then on it was a pitchers' battle between Treakle and Venton Sutton, youthful West Point hurler. Dee Evans, John Coffee and Sutton led the locals in hitting with two hits each.

Waynesboro Bows To Harrisonburg

Valley Team Bunches Hits in Victory.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Harrisonburg, Va., July 7.—With Lefty Hutchison allowing only five hits, Harrisonburg last night took the measure of Waynesboro by a score of 5 to 2.

Harrisonburg hammered Wolfe and Moyers for 12 safeties, but ten runners were left stranded. It required five hits to shove over three runs in the second, the round in which Wolfe retired in favor of Moyers. R. Baker and Rapp each got three hits, while Moyers helped his own cause with two. Floyd Baker, at short, made several sensational plays.

Waynesboro scored in the third with two away, when Moyers and Hulvey doubled and Hutchison uncorked a wild pitch. Harrisonburg bunched nine of the 12 hits in the second and fourth innings when all the runs were scored. Harrisonburg got only one hit off Moyers in the last four innings.

This victory gave Harrisonburg two out of three with Waynesboro so far. It was the visitors' first game under the lights.

Young, Seccor Lead in Polo Victory

Special Dispatch to The Post.

WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS, W. Va., July 7.—The Greenbrier Polo Club today trounced the Fauquier-Loudoun team, of Middleburg, Va., 9 to 5. The match, the second of the season, was played beneath cloudless skies on a hard, dry field.

A well-coordinated attack gave the collegiates an easy victory. Jack Young, jr., former captain of the Pennsylvania Military College Four, and Jay Seccor, 1935 captain of the intercollegiate championship Yale team, were high scorers with three goals apiece, while Bill Rand, jr., of Yale, followed close behind, tallying two goals, and Winston Frost, of Harvard, one.

W. P. Hulbert, playing at back, was the outstanding performer for the invaders from Virginia. Gould Shaw, at No. 2 position, was high point for the visitors with three goals.

Seccor Opens Scoring.

Seccor opened the scoring for the local outfit on a forehand shot only a few minutes after the opening bell, and after the throw in it took just three shots for Young to score on a long forehand. The former Pennsylvania champion followed this with his second goal of the period on a free shot. He put the Greenbrier in front by three points at the end of the first chukker. In the second period the Fauquier-Loudoun four made its first goal on a foul shot, which was followed by two more goals by Greenbrier.

In the third the Virginians made their only threat when Shaw made two shots good midway in the chukker. From this point the Green and White lead was never threatened, Seccor and Rand taking the lead with two goals, increasing the margin of victory in the fifth.

Billy Takes Title After 3 Lean Years; Erases Foe's Early Lead.

By Joseph E. Nettles,
Associated Press Staff Writer.

HOT SPRINGS, Va., July 7.—After three lean years, Billy Howell, of Richmond, came back today to whip Bobby Riegel, Southern amateur champion, 6 and 5, in the final of the State amateur golf tournament here today, and became the only man in the classic's 25-year-old history to win the title four times.

Two up after the morning round, Howell fired steady golf at his Richmond rival in the afternoon and built up a seven-hole margin at the turn as Riegel repeatedly hooked his drives.

With his clubs failing him in the pinch, Riegel tried gamely to stage the long delayed rally the gallery expected, finally pulling himself together to birdie the twenty-ninth and thirtieth holes.

Closed Out on Thirty-first.

But Billy, playing methodically, closed him out on the thirty-first, where Riegel's drive struck in the creekbed and bounced far up the mountainside.

After taking five strokes to reach the green as he floundered about in the rough he conceded Howell the orthodox 4 that won the hole and match.

It was a long time between titles for 23-year-old Billy, who stepped out of the wings to find again the spotlight that had neglected him since 1932.

Over the same Cascades course whose par 71 has never been bettered by an amateur, Billy won his first State amateur title as the 16-year-old school boy sensation in 1928. He repeated in 1931 and won his third title the following year.

Early 3-Hole Lead.

Riegel, after building up a three-hole lead through the first five holes, saw Howell eat up the deficit and finish the first 18, 2 up. Then, while Riegel hooked practically every tee shot into the rough, Billy ran his margin to 7 at the twenty-seventh and coasted home.

Billy will get a chance to win second trophy when he meets the veteran, Ross Puette, of Richmond, in the medal play-off there tomorrow or Tuesday over the James River course of the Country Club of Virginia in the capital city.

Both Riegel and Puette fired 75s in the qualifying round to set the pace through the rain.

It was Billy's short game that built up his winning margin and won the title. Repeatedly accurate approaches to the green saved him after short or hooked seconds endangered his par. He gave his most amazing exhibition on three consecutive holes of the outgoing nine of the afternoon round when he twice chipped within 2 feet of the pin and then exploded from a trap to within 1 foot of the hole.

Not Spectacular Golf.

It wasn't spectacular golf, but it was first-class match golf that kept Billy in the van after overcoming Bobby's early lead. Not a single birdie ornamented Howell's card and he had to work hard for many of his pars.

After ending the morning play 2 up, Howell went 3 up at the nineteenth with a par 4 as Riegel hooked into the rough and went 1 over. They halved the next in fives and then Howell picked up two holes in a row in pars as Riegel hooked his tee shot at the twenty-first and 3-putted the twenty-second.

Billy 3-putted the long twenty-third, but got his half in sixes when Riegel floundered in the rough all the way. They halved the next in par fours, but Howell's par took the twenty-fifth with Riegel trapped and 3-putting.

Chips Within One Foot.

Howell chipped to within one foot of the pin to get his 3½ on the twenty-sixth and then won the next hole with a par when Bobby sent his second shot to the left of the green and approached weakly. After halving the next hole in fives, Reigel won his first hole of the afternoon with a birdie two on the twenty-ninth, where he sent his tee shot within two feet of the pin and holed a 12-foot putt on the thirteenth for another birdie. Then Riegel slashed his drive into the mountains on the thirty-first and lost to Billy's four.

Two Posts Undecided.

Frisch advised officials here he was uncertain about two positions, outside his starting battery. These, he said, are first and second base, but it will be a surprise if a couple of veteran warhorses named Bill Terry and Frank Frisch do not start at these spots. The reserves are Jim Collins, Cardinal first-sacker, and Billy Herman, second baseman of the Cubs.

The Nationals look to have a big hitting edge. Their starting outfield trio of Mel Ott, Wally Berger and Joe Medwick has a margin over the prospective American trio, Bob Johnson, Al Simmons and Joe Vosmik, by .329 to .320 in the unofficial averages. They have tremendous infield power, with Terry, Frisch, Vaughan and Martin averaging around .340 collectively, as compared to a mere .310 for the American's quartet of Gehrig, Gehringer, Cronin and Foxx.

All-Star Game Thought Hurt By Officials

Gallico Bitter About Way of Selecting Players in Contest.

American League teams, respectively, and they have had full say in naming the teams that will meet one another tomorrow, and they and bad luck will keep a number of fine ball players out of the game. Considering all this, I am amazed at the tremendous spectacular interest that still remains in the game, unless Mr. Ward's idea was such a good one that no matter how you kick it around it will still draw a crowd.

There have been few thrills in baseball such as the inning at the Polo Grounds last summer in the All-Star game when Carl Hubbell struck out Babe Ruth, Gehrig and Foxx in a row. Today there is no more Babe Ruth in baseball, Hubbell will hardly get the starting nomination. The Dean boys are in a pique and a slump, Al Simmons is in a slump, Gehrig isn't hitting. There is no real dynamite line-up on either team and no sensational pitching, either, especially if Cochrane starts with Tommy Bridges. No one can print even an approximate batting order and line-up before game time because the managers themselves do not know what to do with the wealth of talent at their disposal. One thing they had best be sure to watch, and that is to put a real star in every position without fear or favor. Otherwise the game will vanish from the scene inside of a year or two.

Psychology Overlooked.

The major league owners and directors, when they took the game away from the fans and the newspapers, overlooked a great piece of human psychology which was at the back of Mr. Ward's head when he invented the game. The baseball spectator is a grandstand manager and a nonparticipant in the game except for strident calls of advice from the stands to which nobody pays any attention. But once a year, the vote for the all-stars gave him the opportunity of participating in the game, and of picking the kind of team he would put on the field if he had such talent at his disposal. Inasmuch as the team chosen by the majority was to have taken the field, the majority of the fans who sent in line-ups could point with pride to his team. He would also jolly well come out and part with a couple of slugs to see his team play. That would have been great fun. But the leagues never did play fair with either the fans or the newspapers.

Waivers Increased In American Loop

Intra-League Price Is Raised to $7,500.

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, July 7.—American League club owners, at a special meeting today, decided to lift the waiver price from $4,000 to $7,500, effective at once, for player transfers within the circuit.

This puts the price on a level with the waiver figure for transfers from one major league to the other. It is designed to stimulate more player exchanges on the theory that a club will be more willing to part with a player desired by a rival team at the increased price.

There was on discusison of the reputed plan to shift the St. Louis American League franchise elsewhere as an economic measure.

Trotting Races Continue.

Cleveland, July 7 (AP).—Drivers of the big line brought their racers and trotters to North Randall track today for a six-day card marking the second week of grand circuit racing.

Macks Salvage Divided Bill With Sox

By the Associated Press.

BOSTON, July 7.—Sensational base-running by Bill Werber gave the Boston Red Sox a 13-inning, 7-to-6 decision over the Philadelphia Athletics in the first game of a double-header today, but home runs by Higgins and Berry accounted for a 3-to-1 victory for the visitors in the eight-inning second game.

With one out in the thirteenth inning, Werber was walked by Marcum. The speedy Boston third baseman stole second and continued to the plate while Warstler was throwing out Dahlgren at first base.

Lefty Grove, of the Sox, held his former teammates to a scratch single in the last five innings of the first game and received credit for the win.

It's Cauliflower Ave. Now That Another Arena Is Open

By George Considine.

BEGINNING a week from tonight, Washington's legion of rassle fans will cancel those Monday evening bridge parties and hie to the American Legion Arena. Or, at least, that is the hope of Promoter Howard Livingston, who threatens to inaugurate a new series of snarlfests at the otherwise sacred arena.

What with the new gang of grapple guys at Fifth and Florida avenue on Mondays and the old mob of matsters at Seventh and Florida avenue on Thursdays, the only logical step seems to be to change the name to Cauliflower-da avenue. We're sorry. 'Twas just a thought.

A branch of the Jack Pfeffer circuit, the company will feature a drastic slice in the usual admission fee. And just as the price list strikes a new low, the caliber of action bids fair to reach a respectable high, says the publicity department.

Featured on the card of five finish matches is a promising struggle between the redoubtable Everett Marshall, recognized as among the four best workmen in the world, and the newly crowned Jewish champion, Max Martin. From this point of vantage in The Post sports department, it looks almost worthwhile.

Not the least important event of the evening will be the grandiose appearance of the distinguished Count Von Zuppe, perhaps the greatest showman of them all. The count invariably shows up for his match garbed in the height of fashion—full dress, cane, silk topper, spats and monocle. A quick zipping of a few zippers leaves the Zuppe in the conventional ring togs.

During the other sessions, Schmeling won with ease, outboxing and outpunching Uzcudun. Some of Paolino's wild swings missed Maxie by such wide margins that the German stood in mid-ring and laughed with the crowd. As Maxie left the ring, virtually unmarked, he waved happily to his wife, Anny Ondra, German film actress, who occupied a ringside seat.

Pittsburgh Ruined By Chicago, 13-1

Cubs Get Six Doubles to Lambast Foe.

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, July 7.—Flashing an attack that gained momentum as the game wore on, the Chicago Cubs lambasted the Pittsburgh Pirates, 13 to 1, today to make it two out of three for the series.

The Bruins carved out 14 hits, 6 of them doubles, from 4 Pirate hurlers and Cy Blanton, sensational youngster, was their first victim. Then they pounded Mace Brown, Ralph Birkofer and Jim Weaver.

Yankees Pound Newsom and Win, 11-1

Gehrig Hits Homer, Three On; Broaca Holds Nats to 6 Hits.

After the Yanks had picked up a third run in the fourth, Newsom's single jolted Broaca out of his shut-out dreams in the fifth as Powell scored on the blow, but with an opportunity to put the Nats in the ball game, Miles struck out with the bases full to make the ignominy of his debut complete.

Fifth Spells Ruin.

It was in the fifth inning that the game got out of hand. Combs and Rolfe singled and Chapman drew a walk to fill the bases and it was then that Gehrig lifted his eleventh home run of the year far over the right field fence to boost the Yankees' lead by four more runs.

The Yanks made it 11-1 in the sixth after two were out. Rolfe beat out a bunt to the limping Newsom, and went to second on the pitcher's wild throw. Chapman walked and Gehrig's single to right scored Rolfe. Lazzeri, who had made only two singles up to that point, then came out of his slump with a line-drive home run into the left field bleachers.

It rained in the last three innings, but the Nats were washed up long before that.

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 7.—The Giants got behind Carl Hubbell today and handed him his tenth pitching victory of the season on his fifth attempt to earn it when they hammered out a 9-to-2 decision over the Dodgers. Brooklyn had won the first two games of the series.

Mel Ott clouted his eighteenth home run of the season with the bases full to bring about the downfall of Ray Benge, and Dick Bartell also hit for the circuit. Hubbell was touched for 12 hits.

Strange as It Seems —By John Hix

CLIMATIC peculiarities of the region of Angora in Turkey seem to give various kinds of animals raised there soft, luxuriant hair for which they are noted. Well known to us are Angora cats, but other animals, notably goats, rabbits and even dogs grow typical Angora hair.

In the old "trust busting" days, corporations were targets of political platforms and legal action. The law's only punitive action was by fine—you can't put a corporation in jail, even if it has committed a crime. The Standard Oil Company of Indiana was indicted in Federal Court in Chicago for violation of the Elkins law. Specifically the corporation was charged with accepting rebates from the Chicago & Alton Railroad in 1903, 1904 and 1905—1,462 separate and distinct charges under the same law.

Judge Kenesaw Mountain Landis, now dictator of organized baseball in America, fined the corporation $20,000 on each count—a total fine of $29,240,000. The case went to the Supreme Court, where the conviction was set aside—and the fine was never paid.

Once Overs

By H. I. Phillips

The New America.

And down with tribulation!
We'll get all comforts, and to spare,
From city, State and Nation!

From cradle to the grave we'll go
Serene and calm and happy,
And through the years we'll kisses blow
To Uncle Sam, our "pappy."

The skies will be forever blue—
The sun will ne'er be hidden;
Umbrellas will be quite taboo,
For rain's to be forbidden.

There'll be no struggles to attain
A home and high position;
You'll write to Washington and gain
It all through requisition.

The ladder to success? You hick!
Forget that bunk! It dates you;
Electric "lifts" will do the trick—

Begin down at the bottom? Poof!
Such talk as that is static;
There'll be no long climb to the roof—
We'll start you in the attic.

Long hours of devotion to
A job you're often hating?
Such silly stuff is not for you—
Our motto is "No Waiting!"

Alarm clocks? Toss those things away!
Forget those early hours!
You soon may sleep throughout the day
Through governmental powers.

Ambition? Energy and toil?
They'll be no longer needed;
The Government will till your soil
And keep your front lawn weeded.

The will to get ahead, my son,
'Twill never, never do you;
You'll merely wire Washington
And get what's coming to you.

Oh, happy days are at the gate,
With comforts all provided;
Just grab a rocking-chair and wait
Till everything's divided.

The Way Cleared.

Now that the Fourth of July is over we can get back to our considerations of the Declaration of Independence.

Ho-Hum.

To watch the beach nymphs cut their capers;
They look old-fashioned when compared

DICK TRACY The License Plate Clue

CHIEF - WE KNOW THE LICENSE NUMBER OF THE CAR THAT CARRIED TESS AWAY.. IT WAS M-2053.
HOW DID YOU DISCOVER THAT?
WE FOUND THE LICENSE NUMBERS IMPRESSED IN A BANK OF DAMP LOAM, WHERE THE CAR HAD SKIDDED AT THE END OF A DEAD-END STREET, JUST OFF THE BRIDGE.
THAT'S MOST UNUSUAL, TRACY! TELL ME MORE OF THE DETAILS.
I'LL EXPLAIN LATER, CHIEF — RIGHT NOW WE —
I TRACED THE OWNER OF LICENSE PLATE M-2053! THAT NUMBER WAS ISSUED TO A DR. MORGAN OTTERHOLM, 2213 ARNOLD AVENUE.
COME ON — THAT'S WHERE WE'RE HEADED FOR NOW.

WINNIE WINKLE, the Breadwinner Time Out

BUT, MR. JITTERS, I'VE BEEN SITTING OUT THERE WAITING FOR HOURS! SINCE EARLY THIS MORNING
SETTIN' OUT THERE FOR HOURS, EH? WELL, YOU WON'T DO FOR TH' JOB !! I'VE GOT NO USE FOR TIME WASTERS!

APPLE MARY By Martha Orr

MR. SPROCKETT, I FOUND A LOVELY OLD HOUSE ON THE EDGE OF TOWN, THAT COULD BE MADE INTO A WONDERFUL HOME FOR MY ORPHANS. YOU GET THE PRICE ON IT FOR ME.
THERE SHE GOES, THROWING AWAY MORE MONEY. WHY GIVE IT TO THOSE ORPHANS? THEY'VE NEVER HAD ANYTHING. THEY WON'T APPRECIATE IT.
I'VE STUCK WITH MARY FOR A LONG TIME. FIGURED IN THE END, I'D COME OUT AHEAD, BUT AT THE RATE SHE'S SPENDING MONEY, THERE WON'T BE ENOUGH LEFT TO WASTE MY TIME ON.
I DOUBLE CROSSED OLD CRAFTEE, TO WORK FOR MARY. THOUGHT I'D BUILD UP HER FORTUNE INTO SOMETHING WORTH TAKING. INSTEAD, ALL I DO IS HAND IT OUT TO THE POOR, AND I'M TIRED OF IT.

DIXIE DUGAN That Stormy Day By J. P. McEvoy and J. H. Striebel

REMEMBER THAT STORMY DAY LAST WINTER WHEN DIXIE BROUGHT HOME A BOX THAT SHE THOUGHT CONTAINED A DOLL, AND — IT'S A BABY-!!
WHAT A SHOCK THE DUGANS GOT WHEN THEY FOUND THAT THE "BABY" WALKED, TALKED AND DID TRICKS — LOOKIT DIS ONE-!!
WE'LL NEVER PERMIT IT-!!
— AND THEN FROM HIS GRIEF-STRICKEN FATHER, THEY LEARNED THAT LADDIE WAS REALLY THREE YEARS OLD AND THAT SOME CIRCUS MAN WAS SCHEMING TO TURN HIM INTO A "SIDE-SHOW" ATTRACTION —
— AND NOW, SAVED FROM THIS FATE — LADDIE WAS STARTED BY DOCTOR BROWN ON A COURSE OF REMARKABLE GROWING TREATMENTS — WHEE — IT TICKLES!!
NO WONDER THEN THERE'S REJOICING ON THE EVE OF LADDIES "COMING OF SIZE" PARTY WHICH DIXIE IS GIVING!

JOE PALOOKA Goodby By Ham Fisher

DEAREST, TAKE CARE OF YOURSELF. I'LL WORRY SO MUCH ABOUT YOU. YOU'RE SUCH A BABY.
I-I WISH'T I COULD COME ALONG. I'M SO SICK OF YURRUP AN' FIGHTIN'.
FIRST CLAS
I'M GONNA! I AINT GOIN' BACK. I'LL SEND KNOBBY A WIRELESST.
DARLING, YOU'LL ONLY MAKE A MESS OF THINGS. YOU MUST GO BACK. PLEASE LISTEN TO ME.
IT WILL ONLY BE FOR A FEW WEEKS -- OH MY JOE -- I'LL BE WAITING BREATHLESSLY.
G-G'BYE MY DEARIST -- THIS IS LIKE DYIN' IS, I GUESS.

THE GUMPS Now on the Radio—Post Comics—WMAL, Sundays, 8:45 a. m. Sitting Pretty

WELL - THAT'S THAT! IMAGINE - CALLING ME UP HERE - DEMANDING THAT I COME HOME AT ONCE SO THAT SHE CAN USE THE CHAUFFEUR - WHEN I GOT MARRIED, ANDY - I MARRIED MILLIE - NOT HER MOTHER -
I'VE TAKEN ALL THAT I'M GOING TO TAKE FROM THAT WOMAN - SHE'D BETTER LEARN THAT FOR ONCE AND FOR ALL!
WELL - I CERTAINLY ADMIRE YOUR STAND - IT TOOK YOU TIME, BUT YOU'VE FINALLY COME TO YOUR SENSES AND STARTED SHOWING THE TRUE GUMP SPIRIT -
YOU SURE LEARNED YOUR LESSON -
WELL, ANDY - MAYBE - I DIDN'T PASS MY EXAMINATIONS - BUT I'M STILL AT THE HEAD OF THE CLASS OF THOSE WHO FAILED -

THE BUNGLE FAMILY Deductions By Harry J. Tuthill

Oakdale! Such nerve. Twirling his dinky little mustache. "Finding" that Count's papers behind a chair that I positively moved 20 times in the last week.
Listen Jo, I personally saw him pick up that case and...
I saw that too, Mother.
Maybe you two keen observers also saw that he was holding something under his coat when he sauntered into this house..... like this.
Oh Mother, how utterly.... well...
In other words Jo, your theory is that it was all done with mirrors. That old Hartford palmed stuff that's about as easy to conceal as arguments at a family reunion.
I did too.
And I heard it drop on the floor just before he "found" it, too. And while both of you stood with your eyes hanging out, waved it in the air and said, Here are the papers! Ugh! Him!
